HIJACKED CREW — Members of the crew of a hijacked British Airways Super VC-10 smiled at a remark by Capt. Hijackers Release British Hostages

PLO Requests Custody Of The Four Guerrillas

TUNIS (UPI) — The Palestine Liberation Organization asked the Tunisian government today for custody of the four guerrillas who hijacked a British Airways VC10 airliner to Tunis, the Palestine News Agency said.

Tunisia announced earlier today it was giving temporary asylum to the four men because no other Arab government appeared to want them. The men had expressed fear they would fall into PLO hands.

All four were taken into custody with seven other guerrillas whose release they had won from jails in Egypt and Holland under threats to kill the 43 passengers and crew aboard the VC10. They did kill a German man. The four hijackers had threatened to blow up the VC10 today with themselves, their guerrilla comrades and the three remaining British crew members but relented at the last moment and freed the three Britons.

The Palestine news agency said the PLO leadership has decided to form a special group which will fly to Tunis soon to talk with the hijackers and investigate circumstances of the incident they said damaged the Arab cause.

The guerrillas, trying to avoid being turned over to angry comrades in the Palestine Liberation Organization, laid down their pistols, submachine guns and grenades this morning to end a four-day air and ground drama.

The commandos then stepped out of an emergency exit of a hijacked British Airways jet and marched down an escape ladder with their last remaining hostages — three British crewmen.

Airport sources said the Palestinians argued among themselves at the last minute whether they should become martyrs for the Palestinian cause by blowing up the VC10 jet and committing suicide.

Tunisian negotiators finally convinced them not to take any more lives. They had killed a passenger, 43-year-old West German banker Werner Kehl, father of three children, on Friday.

The sources said the negotiators talked the guerrillas into accepting Tunisia's offer of a temporary haven to negotiate a permanent sanctuary with another Arab government.

British airline officials said they had informed Tunisian authorities the safety of the crew came first but they didn't care if the Tunisians attacked the plane and blew it up after the crew had been freed.

The crew and guerrillas left the plane in alternating waves apparently to make sure the Tunisians would not open fire.

First came a pilot, then two Palestinainas stepping gingerly down a police ladder, then the second pilot, four more commandos, the plane's navigator and the last five guerrillas.

Sirica May Drop One Of Charges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The prosecution rested its case today in the Watergate coverup trial and U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica indicated he might dismiss part of the indictment against defendants John N. Mitchell and John D. Ehrlichman.

Culminating a 30-month investigation and eight weeks of trial evidence presented against Mitchell, Ehrlichman and three other former aides to Richard M. Nixon, chief trial prosecutor James F. Neal informed Sirica at 12:05 p.m. that the government had concluded its case.

With the jury out of the courtroom, Sirica then hinted strongly that he may dismiss counts charging Mitchell and Ehrlichman with lying to the FBI in the early days of the agency's Watergate investigation.

The two were charged specifically with telling the FBI that they knew nothing more about the Watergate burglary than they read in the newspaper.

Sirica said that if he were on the jury he would not vote to convict either Mitchell or Ehrlichman on those counts.

"Frankly I'm not satisfied with the evidence..." Sirica said. "I don't think it's fair to the defendants involved to send those two counts to the jury if the judge doesn't feel that evidence supports it."

Sirica later was to hear and rule on motions for directed judgment of acquittal by several defendants before trial could proceed. Such motions are routine.

Mitchell, the former attorney general and Nixon campaign manager, was the first defendant to file a written motion for acquittal. His attorney contended "there is not a sufficient amount of evidence with respect to any of the charges ... upon which a reasonable mind might fairly conclude guilt beyond a reasonable doubt."

Standing trial with Mitchell and Ehrlichman were H.R. Haldeman, who like Ehrlichman was once a top Nixon aide; Nixon campaign official Robert C. Mardian and Kenneth W. Parkinson, a Washington lawyer hired to represent Nixon's re-election committee in the Watergate aftermath.

The government's 28th and final witness was Anthony Passaretti, a Treasury Department accountant, who testified that an analysis of trial testimony shows that the original Watergate burglars were given $429,500 in cash from July, 1972, through March 21, 1973.

The government contends these payments amounted to hush money to keep the burglars from disclosing the involvement of high government officials.

Kissinger Reassures The Chinese

PEKING (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger assured Chinese leaders to Monday the three-year-old diplomatic thaw between the United States and China is firmly part of President Ford's foreign policy and will continue.

In a state banquet toast at the huge Peking Peoples Palace, the secretary said the improvement in relations was "one of the most significant initiatives in American foreign policy."

He said it "has not been a matter of expediency, but of fixed principle of American foreign policy."

In an exchange of toasts, new Chinese Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua also hailed the friendlier relations and praised former President Richard Nixon for his part in initiating them.

Kissinger arrived in Peking today on a flight from Tokyo to brief Chinese officials on the Soviet-U.S. Vladivostok summit and discuss the general scope of Sino-U.S. relations in view of changes in Chinese and American leadership.

Diplomatic sources said the talks may also be designed to help ruffled Chinese feelings over the Soviet-U.S. summit and the continued U.S. support of the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan, which China considers part of its territory.

China believes the port of Vladivostok and the surrounding territory were ceded under coercion in a 1960 Sino-Russsian treaty, which they have unsuccessfully tried to renegotiate with the Soviet Union.

It was Kissinger's seventh visit to Peking and the first since President Ford took over as chief executive.

Zarb Nominated For Energy Post

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford today nominated Frank G. Zarb, a key budget and energy adviser, to head the Federal Energy Administration.

The nomination of Zarb had been anticipated since the White House announcement almost two weeks ago that Ford was withdrawing the nomination of Andrew Gibson to run the FEA following a controversy over potential conflict of interest.

Presidential press secretary Ron Nessen, in announcing the choice of Zarb, told reporters that Ford considered him "uniquely qualified" to head the FEA and said all FBI background checks on Zarb "have been made and he passed."

Zarb, 39, is currently associate director of the Office of Management and Budget as well as executive director of the Energy Resources Council. Nessen said that Zarb would retain the latter position after taking on his new job, assuming Senate confirmation.

Zarb was nominated to succeed John T. Sawhill, who has resigned at the FEA. Ford said previously he would be giving both Gibson and Sawhill other important jobs in the administration, but Nessen said he had nothing to announce on those matters today.

Zarb joined the administration in 1971 as an assistant secretary of labor. Previously, he was an executive of Hayden Stone, Inc., a prominent Wall Street stock brokerage firm.

Ford's withdrawal of the Gibson nomination was done at Gibson's request after it became clear that he faced stiff Senate opposition.

Critics focused on Gibson's severance contract with a Philadelphia oil transport company that guaranteed him $88,000 annually over the next 10 years. They said the financial arrangements were bound to raise conflicts of interest with Gibson's role in making federal energy policy.

The White House maintained that Ford was unaware of the severance agreement when he nominated Gibson and acknowledged that the FBI investigations usually conducted in advance of major nominations had been waived temporarily in Gibson's case.

A Separate Connally Trial Set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge today granted former Treasury Secretary John B. Connally's motion for separate trials on the bribery and perjury charges against him in the milk fund case.

During the second day of pretrial hearings, U.S. District Judge George L. Hart ruled a jury might be unduly influenced if it considering all charges against Connally at one time.

Watergate prosecutor John Sale contended all counts of the indictment cover the same underlying charge. He said that the same evidence would be used in both the bribery and perjury counts.

Hart said he was "always worried" about perjury indictments that stem from testimony given under previous indictments.

Hart then began hearing arguments on a defense motion to move the trials out of Washington.

Students Battle On Istanbul Campus

ISTANBUL, Turkey (UPI) — Right-and left-wing students battled with revolvers, knives, sticks and stones on the campus of Istanbul University today.

Police said several students and one military police colonel were wounded. One student was reported in critical condition.

Mrs. Rockefeller Again Has Surgery For Cancer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Margaretta (Happy) Rockefeller today had her cancerous right breast removed and was reported in good condition after the surgery.

The two-hour, 28-minute operation came 39 days after similar, but more extensive, surgery was performed to remove her left breast and 32 lymph nodes in her chest tissue and armpit.

Her husband, Nelson A. Rockefeller, meeting with reporters after visiting his wife in her private room, said, "She's O.K. It's all over. This time I have good news."

Dr. Jerome A. Urban, acting chief of breast services at Sloan-Kettering Memorial Cancer Center and the head of the surgical team that performed today's operation, said, "We expect a good prognosis."

He predicted that Mrs. Rockefeller would be able to leave the hospital in "four or five days." She was in the hospital for seven days after her first operation.

Mrs. Rockefeller was given a 90 per cent chance for a full recovery over 10 years after her first operation and Urban said after today's surgery "It's the same prognosis. It hasn't changed."

He said the surgery was "preventive" because the only lesion that they had found was "about the diameter of a piece of pencil lead."

He said he removed about eight or 10 lymph nodes from Mrs. Rockefeller's right armpit area during the operation and a preliminary examination showed the tissue to be "all clear." He said, however, that more detailed tests would be performed and the results would be available tomorrow.

"Happy's physical condition is very good," Urban said. "She awakened very quickly after the surgery. She's a strong woman."

Rockefeller said his wife's first words after waking up in the recovery room were, "Thank God." He said she was "so grateful to the doctors and the nurses and everybody here."

Employment Holding Up Well In Marin County's Industries

By MARY LEYDECKER and WAT TAKESHITA

"So far, so good," said the man in an old New Yorker cartoon as he passed the 95th floor after jumping off the top of the Empire State Building.

Many Marin County businessmen seem to agree with the jumper as they sum up the present economic situation.

Handi-Kup Co. in Corte Madera, which employs about 100 people, seemed pretty typical of the county's businesses.

"So far our orders have held up, and we look for business to hold at present levels," said Peter J. Hunt, who with his brother, Patrick, heads the business.

"We have no layoffs and are anticipating none, although we are not adding new people."

He did point out, though, that the foam cups and containers produced by the company go into the "fast food" business, and "in a recession, more people may turn to fast food places like hamburger shops instead of regular dining places."

Price Pact Seems Sure To Keep Crab A Luxury

The crab boats were 'a-comin' " today, as a strike by fishermen ended with a price settlement guaranteed to make the tasty crustaceans mighty expensive again this year.

Peter Sandvig of Ocean Traders in Sausalito said the fishermen will get $1 a pound for their crabs, the price they had sought.

This will drive the retail price up to $1.75 to $2 said Lou Sabella of Sabella's restaurant and market in Alto.

He explained that fishermen "have become better organized" in recent years and limit their catches in order to keep prices up.

As the crab season opened in the San Francisco area, many boats from Eureka also put out crab pots yesterday, Sandvig said, because the northern season doesn't start until Dec. 1.

Boats went out yesterday to set the pots and were expected back with them late this afternoon.

Sabella said he doubted crab prices will drop much this year, even after the northern season opens.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Romania's Anti-Kremlin Line

BUCHAREST (UPI) — President Nicolae Ceausescu today opened the 11th Romanian Communist party congress with a restatement of his nation's stands on noninterference and sovereignty.

Ceausescu

He also came out firmly against the Soviet Union's desire to drum China out of the World Communist movement.

The 56-year-old party secretary also called for an end to the arms race and establishment of a new world economic order.

But alongside this reiteration of Romania's maverick foreign policy which since 1968 has deviated from the Kremlin line, Ceausescu paid tribute to the Soviet Union's role in promoting detente and pledged to improve relations with the Russians.

Asks Thieu To Quit

SAIGON (UPI) — A former battle field commander today urged President Nguyen Van Thieu to resign to give South Vietnam a fresh start.

In a related move, opposition forces announced plans for a march Thursday by at least 10,000 persons demanding freedom of the press for Saigon newspapers.

Maj. Nguyen Van Thinh, a deputy battalion commander until he was wounded and retired from the army, publicly called on Thieu to step down.

"Our utmost desire is to see an early change of leadership in South Vietnam," he told newsmen at Saigon's National Assembly building.

"Especially, President Thieu should resign so that the people and the army can live a new life."

Protestant Killed

BELFAST (UPI) — A burst of machine gun fire from a passing car killed one Protestant post office employee and seriously wounded another today as they walked to work on a Belfast street.

It was the eighth fatal shooting in Belfast in four days.

Police said a passenger in the car fired at least 23 rounds at the two post office workers before speeding away. One man, aged 55, was hit in the head and neck and died later in a hospital.

The second man suffered serious abdominal wounds.

Ban On IRA Seen

LONDON (UPI) — Britain moved today to outlaw the Irish Republican Army and British police were ordered on full alert against expected IRA reprisals. Recent bombings attributed to the IRA killed 19 persons, and six Northern Ireland natives were charged today with murder in the blasts.

The outlawing of the IRA was expected this afternoon when Home Secretary Roy Jenkins went before Parliament to outline new anti-terrorist proposals. Government sources said they will include a ban on the IRA which is outlawed in Northern Ireland but is still legal in Britain.

Heart Transplant

CAPETOWN, South Africa (UPI) — Heart transplant pioneer Christian Barnard gave a new heart to a patient late yesterday but did not remove the existing heart, a Groote Schuur hospital spokesman said today.

It is the first time since heart transplants began seven years ago that the original heart has been left intact, the spokesman said.

The spokesman said the new heart will help improve the blood circulation of the patient.

Nears Big Wind

MOUNTAIN VIEW (UPI) — Pioneer 11 entered Jupiter's intense radiation field today and sped toward a major space obstacle — the crossing of a million-mile-per-hour solar wind.

Scientists said the 560-pound spacecraft would encounter the dangerous "bow shock wave" between now and Wednesday. The phenomenon is caused by the collision of Jupiter's magnetic field and the solar wind and is much like the wake created by a boat through water.

III Archbishop Visited By Pope

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI left the Vatican yesterday to visit gravely ill Archbishop Luigi Rovigatti, the third-ranking clergyman in the Roman Catholic hierarchy.

The Vatican said the pope spent 15 minutes at Rovigatti's bedside in Calvary Hospital. The archbishop was visibly moved by the pope's words of comfort, the Vatican said.

Rovigatti, 62, as vice regent of Rome, assists Cardinal Ugo Poletti, vicar of Rome. He underwent brain surgery a year ago and recently suffered a relapse, doctors said.

FORD RETURNS — With First Lady Betty Ford standing by, the President last night addressed a gathering at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., upon his return from a 17,000-mile Far Eastern trip and summit talks which produced basic agreement on U.S.-Russian arms ceilings to "constrain our military competition over the next decade."

Ethiopia Plans To Court Martial 140 After Executing 60 Ex-Aides

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — The Ethiopian military government plans to follow up the weekend executions of 60 former officials by court-martialing an estimated 140 one-time leaders linked to corruption charges.

Radio Ethiopia said the new military trials would take place immediately, but the government-run station did not say whether the regime would ask for more death penalties.

The radio said 60 of an estimated 200 former officials arrested by the military rulers since coming to power last February were put to death for "crimes against the Ethiopian people." "other officials now in detention on corruption charges will be brought immediately before the general and district courts martial," the station said yesterday in three identical broadcasts.

The station said the officials, including a grandson of deposed Emperor Haile Selassie, the head of the military regime and two ex-prime ministers, were executed for "attempts to disrupt the country's popular movement." "Those executed have been found guilty of trying to sow dissension and division within the armed forces, of putting their own personalities above the general welfare of the state and of grossly abusing authority," the radio said. The executions left an estimated 140 former leaders -cabinet ministers, educators, military men, members of the royal family and government aides — still being held. The the men executed included Gen. Aman Andom, who was ousted in a power struggle Saturday as chairman of the ruling Provisional Military Advisory Council.

The radio said a non-council member would be picked in a few days to succeed the American-educated general, considered a moderate on the 120-man council.

Others executed included Eskinder Desta, Selassie's grandson and one-time deputy commander of the imperial navy, and former Prime Ministers Aklilu Hapte Wold and Endalkatchew Makonnen.

There was no mention of Selassie. The 82-year-old ruler of Ethiopia for a half-century was arrested Sept. 12 and has not been seen in public since.

The broadcast said all 60 men were already buried, but gave no indication when, where or how the executions took place. The radio said nobody would be granted access to the bodies.

Military patrols were reinforced in Addis Ababa, but the capital appeared calm. However, travelers reported panic on the streets of the Eritrean city of Asmara, 400 miles to the north.

Aman was a native of the area and tried to reach a peaceful agreement between the Ethiopian government and Eritrean rebels fighting for the province's independence.

U.S., Russia Will Limit The Nuclear Arms Race

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev have agreed to limit the nuclear arms race for the next decade.

Returning last night from the Vladivostok summit talks, where the agreement was reached, Ford stressed that "many details remain to be worked out by our negotiators."

"But ceilings on the strategic forces of both nations have been accepted," he said. "A good agreement that will serve the interests of the United States and the Soviet Union is within our grasp."

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said the agreement in principle was the breakthrough in nuclear arms talks "that we have sought in recent years."

"We have achieved a cap on the arms race if we can solve the technical problems of implementing the agreement that was made here," Kissinger told reporters in Vladivostok. "But I believe that with good will that should be possible."

Administration sources said it allows the Soviet Union to keep its advantage in numbers of intercotinental nuclear missiles but lets the United States keep its advantage in the number of missiles equipped with multiple warheads.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen was exultant. "It is one of the most significant agreements since World War II," Nessen declared, saying "Richard Nixon could not achieve this in five years, President Ford achieved it in three months."

Tomorrow Ford will begin explaining still secret details of the agreement to congressional leaders of both parties, and he will brief more members of Congress during the week.

He could meet opposition from legislators such as Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., who have resisted previous U.S.-Soviet nuclear accords as giving too much away to the Russians.

A spokesman for Jackson said his arms control subcommittee would hold hearings on the agreement "as soon as possible."

Administration officials said Ford expects to receive within a week a written statement from Brezhnev confirming points on which the two leaders agreed verbally.

Broad outlines of the agreement were set forth in a statement signed by Ford and Brezhnev yesterday in the second floor solarium of a health spa near the icy Siberian port city of Vladivostok.

U.S. officials hope the technicalities can be worked out at U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation talks resuming in Geneva in January and the agreement could be formally signed when Brezhnev visits the United States the following May or June.

It goes beyond an interim nuclear arms accord signed between Brezhnev and former President Richard Nixon in May, 1972, which expires in October, 1977. The new agreement would run from then until December 31, 1985.

Ford appeared tired but elated as he walked down the ramp of Air Force One at Andrews Air Force base near here Sunday night after an 8- day, 16,550 mile journey to Japan, South Korea and the Soviet Union, his first veture into global diplomacy.

His wife, Betty, and daughter, Susan, kissed and hugged him. Ford told about 200 welcomers: "I believe we accomplished what we set out to achieve —and perhaps more."

He referred to the nuclear agreement w th Brezhnev as an understanding which "established a sound basis for a new agreement that will constrain our military competition over the next decade."

Ford arrived in Vladivostok Saturday, flying from South Korea via Tokyo, where Air Force One picked up a Soviet navigator and radio operator.

He and Brezhnev talked during a two-hour train ride to Okeanskiy, a spa and sanitorium used by Soviet government agencies.

Saturday night they met until half past midnight, canceling a banquet, and resumed on Sunday. One U.S. aide said the two leaders "hit it off famously."

Brezhnev told Ford that if the nuclear agreement is finally signed "You and I will be thanked by all the peoples of the world. I think we have done a good job in this respect, here in Vladivostok."

The two leaders signed their joint statement with champagne and celebrated later with vodka.

They also issued a joint communique calling for a just and lasting peace in the Middle East, efforts to control the spread of nuclear weapons to other countries and long term economic cooperation.

They returned to Vladivostok by train and Brezhnev gave Ford a tour of that city, which has been closed to Americans for 26 years.

"Good-bye and God bless you," Ford told Brezhnev as he boarded Air Force One for the flight home.

Coal Negotiators Agree On An Improved Contract

By CHARLES FLINNER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Coal negotiators agreed on an improved contract last night.

The agreement came after informal talks among negotiators for the Bituminous Coal Operators Association and the United Mine Workers of America. Some 120,000 miners have been out on strike since Nov. 12.

The settlement was announced by Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, who conferred with industry officials for more than three hours.

The tentative pact supersedes what both sides had called "probably the best agreement in any industry that has been made in modern times."

The earlier arrangement, reached Nov. 13, was scuttled by the union's militant 39-member bargaining council, which is expected to begin its review of the new offer by tomorrow.

The council was not satisfied with the original tentative contract and voted "almost unanimously" to send UMW President Arnold Miller back to the bargaining table.

Neither Miller nor chief industry negotiator Guy Farmer would answer questions about the contract. Simon said, "I'll make no comment on the package until it is ratified by the miners."

The union handed out a joint statement which read: "The UMWA and BCOA have tonight agreed in principle on improvements in the tentative contract package.

"We intend to devote Monday to the task of finalizing contract language so that a complete and final document can be presented."

A Young Gulliver With A Guitar

By LEW CODDINGTON

"I may say I'm going to Athens, but Athens isn't what really matters. It's what's in between that counts."

The speaker was 22-year-old Daniel Niblock of Ross, whose casual, take-it-as-it-comes approach to traveling has led him to a staggering variety of places.

Mexico, Canada, Europe, North Africa, the Middle East, India, Southeast Asia, Japan — all of them have been visited by the outgoing guitar-toting Niblock.

Sometimes he hitchhikes. Sometimes he talks his way onto a boat. Sometimes he travels with friends. Whatever the method, he seems to benefit from astonishing good fortune.

Take one time when he was in Italy. Broke, but not especially worried about it, he was playing his guitar for a group of children when one of their mothers gave him 1,000 lira. Another parent gave him a ride to the train station and bought him a 25-cent ticket for a short hop. The conductor said "Barcelona," however, so Niblock sat back and enjoyed the ride.

"The kindness of people has helped me out many times," he said. "Every day you get a bunch of beautiful little insights. You have these one-hour or two-hour relationships that are really nice.

"If you have a guitar it serves as an international language. I play for smiles. I've had 30 or 40 children following me down the street — laughing, singing, smiling."

The whole thing started back in 1966, when 14-year-old Daniel spent his three-month summer vacation driving around Mexico in a pickup truck with a friend.

The next two summers, it was western Canada, including a week lost in the deep woods, until some American draft evaders ran into him and told him how to get out. ("Originally, I was trying to get to Tahoe, but the guy who picked me up said he was going to Vancouver, so I went," Niblock said.)

In 1969, after graduating from Sir Francis Drake High School, he was ready for a bigger junket. He hitched to New York, flew to Europe, traipsed around Luxembourg, Germany, Holland, Italy and Spain, then leapfrogged to North Africa.

He went to Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia, then doubled back to London, hoping to enter the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. That was in September. Told he would have to wait until the following June, Niblock hoisted up his knapsack and went to Spain to study at the University of Barcelona. He also hit Switzerland, Yugoslavia, Hungary and some Mediterranean islands.

In the meantime, he changed his mind about drama, so he returned in the fall of 1971 and attended College of Marin for a semester.

Then the bug bit again, and it was off to Afghanistan, with a stop in Greece. Then Scotland, Norway, and a return to Marin to continue his cinematography studies.

South America had somehow eluded him, so he went to Guatemala (where he was temporarily blinded by a mosquito which flew into his eye) and Peru.

"I was sitting there, gazing at the Andes one day, and I decided that I had seen a lot of the world in fragments, but what I should do is make one clean motion around the world."

On Feb. 10, 1974, he began his biggest tour. He hitched to Newfoundland, flew to Scotland, then hitched across Europe through the Middle East, India and southeast Asia. Out of money in Bangkok, he promised a first mate he would "work hard and work dirty," and ended up toiling in an engine room of a commercial ship which reached Seattle via the Philippines, Hong Kong, Taiwan and Japan.

In Seattle, he bought a bicycle and pedaled down the coast to Marin in 12 days. "I was back in time to vote for Jerry Brown," he said.

The trip was partially underwritten by the $160-$200 a month he received from social security payments following his father's death, but delivery wasn't always reliable. He recalls spending $300 in Greece waiting for a $400 payment which never arrived.

Mostly, though, he just relied on his own ability to make friends. "If you know just a few words of a language, people really enjoy it. If you ask for a cup of tea in Iranian, you get it served with a big, fat smile.

"I really have a high opinion of the people of the world. They have been so good to me. And not just the young people. Also the middle-aged and the old.

"I'd like to do something for the world with my films."

Niblock plans to enroll at San Francisco State next fall to study cinematography. In the meantime, he wants to take a camera to Guatemala over Christmas vacation to do a film on folkloric dance and music.

So the traveling is not over. "I love the feeling of being completely away from any form of the 20th century," he said. "I like to be lost in the ages."

Sagging Auto Sales Mean Massive Worker Layoffs

DETROIT (UPI) — A 40 per cent plunge in new car sales in mid-November means lengthy layoffs for more than 200,000 workers and the closing of half of North America's auto assembly plants before Christmas.

The number of workers on short and long-term layoffs will climb from about 100,000 in this holiday-shortened Thanksgiving week to more than 200,000 in the weeks before Christmas.

About 85,000 workers will not return to their jobs after the scheduled Christmas-New Year's holiday.

The Nov. 11-20 sales report due late today was cited by analysts as a prime reason for the almost daily announcements of layoffs from automakers last week.

Twenty-five of 52 U.S. and Canadian assembly plants will be closed for all or part of December.

An estimated 170,000 cars were sold in mid-November and, with the exception of the first 10 days of the month, the period was the worst since early March.

This year's sharp drop compared with sales last year, when the Arab oil embargo already was starting to slow car sales.

Industry executives feared the drastic production cuts next month may just push sales even lower as more Americans put off purchases until the economy rebounds.

Several Detroit-area dealers reported order cancelations in the past two weeks.

Some executives, describing this month as "Black November," fear next month might become known as "Dark December." Rumors persisted of even more massive white collar cutbacks at General Motors and Ford. Chrysler is reacting sharpest to the disastrous sales. the No. 3 automaker will close five of its seven U.S. and Canadian plants from Thanksgiving to Jan. 6, idling 28,700 workers indefinitely and 37,200 temporarily. In addition, 10,000 salaried workers are being laid off at Chrysler in December and as many as 20,000 managerial employees are being told to take next year's vacation now.

Vocational Education Falls Short

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Many students of the nation's vocational training schools don't get the jobs they prepared for and make less money than graduates of four-year colleges and universities, says a University of California report.

The 200-page document was prepared for the federal government by Wellford W. Wilms of the UC Berkeley Center for research and development in high education.

His findings were reported in the Los Angeles Times.

Wilms said the occupations studied were accounting, computer programming, cosmetology, electronics, dental assisting and secretarial work.

The findings were based on job-finding experiences of 2,270 graduates from 50 schools chosen at random in Boston, Chicago, Miami and the San Francisco Bay Area.

There were three major findings: that eight of every 10 graduates of professional and technical-level postsecondary vocational programs didn't get the jobs they trained for; that eight of every 10 graduates of lower-level vocational programs got the jobs they prepared for, but — secretaries excepted — barely earned the federal minimum hourly wage of $1.90; and that students who train at vocational schools stand a poorer chance of getting jobs than graduates of four-year schools and earn less money.

The researcher described his findings as "a study in tragedy" because many low-income students seek vocational training in the belief that it will lead to better paying jobs and improved social status, which rarely happens.

He recommended that the government rate the effectiveness of vocational programs and that schools be required to adhere to truth-in-advertising requirements.

Tiburon Tower Will Be Eyed As Landmark

A proposal to make the Lyford Hygeia stone tower in Tiburon an historical landmark will be discussed by the city council today at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

A council-appointed landmarks committee has asked the city to give this designation to the 90-year-old tower at 2034 Paradise Drive.

The tower and a stone archway once marked the entrance to Hygeia, an early real estate development founded by Dr. Benjamin Lyford.

The designation would prevent tearing down or remodeling of the tower without city approval. Dentist A. L. Caceres of Belvedere, now owner of the tower, has protested that the structure should not be named a landmark unless the city will pay for it and the land it stands on.

Also today, the council will discuss whether or not to go ahead with landscaping for the Belveron minipark. Bids for the project have been about $25,000 more than the $9,000 the city hopes to pay.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

Bill Of Rights Protection

Long ago political philosophers said that "No right is held more sacred or is more carefully guarded than the right to personal privacy." Yet, the constitution does not express this right.

The Supreme Court has said that certain personal rights may be found in the various Bill of Rights. The right to privacy is "the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized men."

The Supreme Court struck down a State law which prohibited the use of birth control devices. The State had no business checking on what people do in the privacy of their homes. Another case involved the possession of dirty movies found in one's home. No right to intrude.

The courts have long held that wiretaps, wall microphones, and trespasses to gain evidence in criminal cases are illegal. The conviction would be overturned.

The constitution has never subscribed to a rule of "get them any way you can."

In a recent case, the police peeked into a plumbing line leading to a closed public restroom. They found several people engaging in illegal activities and arrested them. Their conviction was overturned. The police methods violated proper investigative activities. There are areas where people have a right to expect privacy.

In still another case, the police put a microphone on the top of a phone booth that was otherwise isolated. A bookie was using the phone to place his bets, always with the booth closed. The police could not use this method to gather evidence. It violates the right to expected privacy.

People in their own home, in an enclosed office, store, hotel room, shed, or in the trunk of their car should be able to expect privacy. Government should not be able to violate it.

The problem has become complicated since the development of electronic listening and seeing devices. The traditional rules of trespass and search and seizure no longer cover these activities. The courts are giving more attention to the general "right to privacy," and the principle that the Bill of Rights protects people, no just places.

Wild Brawl Caps Canal Area Party

A noisy party in San Rafael's Canal area was capped by a "wild brawl" early yesterday, city police reported.

San Rafael police said up to 50 people, some armed with pipes and knives, battled in a free-for-all at the corner of Canal and Novato streets shortly after midnight.

No one was arrested as a result of the melee because it had all but broken up by the time officers arrived. A number of men were treated at Marin General Hospital for cuts and bruises.

Police could offer no explanation for the fight, but said it "apparently was racially divided, whites on one side and blacks on the other."

The combatants were partygoers who had attended a noisy gathering at the residence of Brian MacIver of 275 Canal Street, Apt. 18, according to officers.

According to one report, a fight involving a few men in the street grew into a melee as partygoers poured out of the Canal Street apartment.

San Rafael police reported they had appeared at the MacIver residence about an hour earlier to request him to turn down his stereo.

Two young women told officers the combatants swarmed around their car, attempting to pull them from the vehicle. Another woman told police several men tried to pull her clothes off.

CBS Is Canceling 'Apple's Way' Show

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS-TV is canceling "Apple's Way" and replacing it with a musical variety comedy program starring Cher Bono.

She was the singing co-star of the top-rated "Sonny and Cher" musical-comedy show that CBS canceled last spring after her marriage to Sonny Bono broke up. Bono's ABC program this year has already been cancelled.

Losses Top $4,000 In Burglaries

Burglars hit two Southern Marin residences last week, taking $2,000 or more in possessions from each one, Marin sheriff's deputies reported today.

They said thieves removed glass louvers from a window Thursday or Friday from an apartment at 44 Ross Road, near Sausalito.

Taken from the residence occupied by Gloria A. Stringham and Abbi J. Bischof were $1,000 in jewelry plus clothing, a tape deck and a camera worth another $1,000, said deputies.

Stephen F. Calhoun, of 156 California Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, reported burglars broke a window to enter his residence on Wednesday. Taken were stereo and camera equipment and a television, valued at $2,250.

Israeli Leader Honors Shapell

BEVERLY HILLS (UPI) — Israeli Minister of Justice Haim J. Zadok yesterday presented the prime minister's medal, one of his nation's highest honors, to Nathan Shapell, a former Nazi concentration camp inmate who became an American businessman and author.

Shapell, once a prisoner at Auschwitz, arrived in the United States in 1951. He is president of the $95-million-a-year Shapell Industries Inc., and recently published a book on Nazi atrocities, "Witness to the Truth."

Friend Honored By Billy Graham

SWEETWATER, Tex. (UPI) — Billy Graham helped honor his boyhood friend, Graty Wilson, with a surprise appearance yesterday at a tribute for the vice president of his evangelist association.

"Graty has made a tremendous impact on my life and my associations in the ministry," Graham said of Wilson. He said he and Wilson attended school together in Charlotte, N.C. "I used to sit in wonderment listening to Graty's sermons, that a kid I had known in high school could know so much in the pulpit," Graham said.

San Rafael Man Dies After Fall

A 35-year-old San Rafael man was killed yesterday when he plummeted from his third floor apartment into an alleyway.

Justo Garcia, of 1330 Fourth Street, Apt. 23, died at Marin General Hospital at 8:10 p.m. yesterday following surgery, according to a hospital spokesman.

San Rafael police said they found Garcia lying in an alleyway beneath the open window of his third-floor residence. Police said Garcia had either jumped or fell from the window.

His apartment doorway was bolted from the inside, police said.

Childless Couples Happiest

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Results of a nationwide survey by University of Michigan reserarchers indicates married couples without children are happier and more satisfied than those who become parents.

Couples are finding out that "parenthood involves both costs and rewards, and during the years of raising small children, the cost appear to be substantial," according to the researchers.

The project was conducted by the university's Institute for Social Research. It shows that as soon as a couple has a child, contentment with life drops sharply and stress between the parents mounts.

IRS Director Angus Campbell said yesterday the most unsatisfying marriages are those in which the couple's child is under six years of age. As the child grows, Campbell said, the parents become happier and when they are "alone again, their general contentment is again high."

The project, concentrated on 2,200 selected Americans to find out how they felt about their lives in general. Campbell said results are still being analyzed.

About 88 per cent of the childless wives between the ages of 18 and 29 said they were "generally happy with life as a whole". About 73 per cent of the husbands in that age group without children also said they were happy.

In contrast, only 65 per cent of the husbands and wives with children under six years of age said they were satisfied with life as a whole.

Brokers Lose $100 Million In 1st Nine Months

NEW YORK (UPI) — Broker firms on the New York Stock Exchange lost nearly $100 million in the first nine months of the year, the exchange said today.

The NYSE said that during the third quarter, member organizations reported an aggregate pre-tax loss of $34.1 million, bring the nine-month loss to $91.8 million. It was the second straight quarterly deficit reported by the brokerage houses.

In the third quarter of 1973, member firms had profits of $19.9 million; but in the nine-month period had an overall loss of $162.1 million.

Women Are Told To Learn Trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — Francois Giroud, France's secretary for women's affairs, says "the most important thing in the world" for a woman is to learn a trade.

"To stick to a man because you can't pay the rent is something abominable," she said yesterday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

Mrs. Giroud, who was named to the new cabinet post this year, also said women should be included in all areas of decision making.

ECONOMY

though, are feeling the effects of the building slowdown.

"The volume of sales is down, particularly this month," said Philip Maley, office manager for McNear Co. Inc., which manufactures concrete blocks.

However, the company is keeping on its 25 employees in order to build up a material stockpile. Maley said he cannot foresee what the coming year will bring, but indicated a cutback may be necessary if construction continues to drop.

The adjacent L. P. McNear Co. on McNear's Point, which makes bricks, is working at full capacity according to Lawrence P. McNear Jr., vice president.

"At the moment, we're as busy as bird dogs because our prices are lower than the competition, but I don't know what will happen when our prices go up on Dec. 1," McNear siad.

He added that his firm caters largely to the do-it-yourself homeowner, and "people are stocking up on our products before prices go up."

"In this business, there's a time lag of about a year," said George Doka, superintencent for the Basalt Rock Co., which has two plants in Marin. "If the building slowdown continues, cutbacks are possible, but we hope not."

At least one small manufacturer, though, General Housewares Corp. will close down its San Rafael candle factory in December, throwing five people out of work. A distribution center, however, which employs about 20 people will remain open.

H. K. Draper, operations manager for San Rafael, said the depressed market forced the closing of the plant.

One of Marin's larger private employers, Fairchild Semiconductor diode plant in San Rafael, reportedly is laying off employees, but the number could not be confirmed.

Fred Hoar, vice president of communications for the firm, said it is the policy of his company not to release figures on employment or layoffs.

A surprisingly cheerful note was sounded by a manufacturer of a luxury item — the Pool Sweep automatic swimming pool cleaner.

"We are a growing company and don't see any possibility of cutbacks through 1975," said Dale Jorgenson, vice president and controller for Arneson Products in Corte Madera, which employs about 100 people.

Sales tax figures indicate the county's retailers are holding their own but not experiencing any of the growth which swelled receipts from year to year in the past.

William J. Bielser, city manager in San Rafael, said sales taxes in the city are up about 8.5 per cent over the same period last year, but that this represents "probably only an inflationary factor."

He said merchants have told him their businesses are "stagnant," but holding their own.

Probably hardest hit of all are the car dealers, whose plight was described in Friday's Independent-Journal.

In that article by Paul Cane, it was reported that Marin and Southern Sonoma residents, like Americans across the country — simply are not purchasing as many automobiles. A few dealers reported moderately good sales, but all those queried said used cars are selling better than average for this time of the year. Most dealers, Cane reported, are willing to offer a better price to buyers in order to move cars off their lots, but some dealers declared that the lower prices haven't had much impact because "people just aren't in the buying mood."

As for the unemployment rate, a spokesman for the Department of Human Resources said statistics are available only for the whole Bay Area, where unemployment currently is at 8 per cent, as compared to 7.2 per cent last year.

"I suspect it may be a little less in Marin," but I don't have any figures to prove it," he said.

Plan Would Ease Doctor Shortage

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Lt. Gov.-elect Mervyn Dymally and Assemblyman Richard Alatorre plan to sponsor legislation next month to help ease California's doctor shortage.

Dymally and Alatorre, both Los Angeles Democrats, this week said their proposal would provide a state-financed intensive training program for foreign medical graduates to help them pass California's medical licensing examinations.

Dymally said that under the state's licensing requirements, foreign medical graduates can practice in federal medical institutions in California but not in state or local hospitals because of differing requirements.

Child Molester Given Sentence

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — A 44-year-old Petaluma music store owner has received a suspended sentence for child molesting.

Willard O. Pence, of 920 Catalpa Way, was given a year's suspended sentence Friday by Sonoma Superior Court Judge Kenneth M. Eyemann. The judge also placed him on probation for three years, ordered him to register with police as a sex offender and to seek psychiatric counseling.

Pence was arrested on July 31 after what local police said was a six-week investigation.

He was found guilty of molesting a girl under 14 years old over a 10-month period while she took guitar lessons from him once a week. Pence owns The Music Shop at 115 Washington Street.

Looter Of Police Car Is Sought

Fairfax police are seeking a thief who looted a city police car yesterday.

The unlocked vehicle, parked in the police department lot on Park Road between 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. last night, was stripped of equipment valued at more than $900, police said.

Taken from the car was an $800 two-channel police radio, as well as a suitcase containing handcuffs, a fingerprint kit, bullets, and an edition of the California penal code.

Also taken were "numerous manuals on auto theft detection," police reported.

Parking Spaces Will Be Changed

Rearrangement of parking spaces during realigning of Bon Air Road near Marin General Hospital will be discussed at a meeting at the Marin Hospital District board at 7 p.m. tomorrow in the Coral Room of the hospital.

Also on the agenda is a discussion of policies concerning how long various patient records should be kept by the hospital.

The board meets for dinner in the hospital cafeteria prior to the business meeting.

Army Recruiting Centered At Fort Baker

By BARBARA HOSMER

Evicted from its Presidio office on property which will be turned over to the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, the Western Regional Command now supervises Army recruiting for 10 states from a spacious old building at Fort Baker, nestled at the foot of Golden Gate Bridge.

The two-story white brick building faces a neatly-clipped central green and seems more a part of a tiny, quiet village at the edge of the bay than the heart of Army recruitment from Montana to Hawaii.

In the past the building played a strategic military role as command headquarters for the busy Sixth Army Air Defense which had responsibility for defending the Golden Gate during two world wars.

Today, instead of command cars, a mobile Army recruiting station is parked out back. And Madison Avenue-style advertising and promotion campaigns for the all-volunteer Army, not military orders, issue from the high-ceilinged offices.

Last week, while the Sixth Army Band struck up marches, Army brass turned out in dress blues to hold a grand opening of old building 636. Earlier rains drove the ceremony into a gym next door, where the recruiting command chief, Col. Philip S. Day Jr., spoke to some 200 military and civilian employees and guests and former Army recruiting commander, Maj. Gen. John Q. Henion, told them they had a big job ahead.

Col. Day then snipped a red, white and blue ribbon with giant shears and invited guests to take a brief tour of the building.

With the pressure for recruitment of volunteers, the command had outgrown its former offices in the two old barracks at the Presidio, said Lora Shaner of Mill Valley, deputy director of the advertising and sales promotion division.

"Now we've got a phone at every desk instead of two people to every phone," said Col. Day. He predicted the staff will grow to further fill the offices, set at the end of long halls painted institutional green.

The command, one of five in the U.S., supervises the daily recruiting efforts of 220 recruiting stations and 11 enlistment centers spread from Butte, Mont., to Honolulu and Fairbanks. From Building 636 employees parcel out monthly recruitment goals to 11 recruitment districts and keep a sort of body count by percentages.

A big board near the recruiting division on the second floor shows at a glance that Hawaii has exceeded its recruitment while the North Coast Division (containing Marin and Sonoma) has run about 90 per cent for several months.

But numbers don't tell the complete story, recuiting division staffers cautioned. Getting 90 per cent with a high ratio of high school graduates may be better than getting higher numbers of recruits with less education, they said.

The army is eager to upgrade the quality of its volunteers these days, and so it employs Madison Avenue sales techniques to bring them in.

Miss Shaner said, high school seniors are the main targets of the recruiting effort. She said the Army retains the A. W. Ayer advertising agency nationally to design and create such enticements as full color ads for popular magazines and glossy book covers for high school students.

"And we run a small advertising agency here," using latest promotion techniques and two staff artists to supplement the national campaign, she said.

The artists are among nine civilians and a master sergeant Western Command employs to promote the Army in posters, ads and give-aways. Many of their recruitment ads — often in the form of cartoon panels — are placed in high school newspapers. Others go into local football schedule booklets or magazines. And the command places classified ads in newspapers throughout the 10 states.

Modern Army sales techniques may mean anything from a bus tour of Fort Ord to a plastic metric-system ruler given out free to high school classes.

Results are charted monthly on the big black tally board in old building 636, so that employees can tell at a glance how they're doing.

New Planners Agree On Zoning Law Needs

The chief task looming before the Corte Madera planning commission is rewriting the town's zoning laws to conform with the general plan, the commission's two newest members agree.

Steve C. Thompson and Betty Pierce recently were named to the five-member commission by the town council. They replace John W. Gates, who resigned following a heart attack, and James W. McClintock, whose resignation was requested by the council.

Both Thompson and Mrs. Pierce have been active on citizens committees in Corte Madera the past few years.

Mrs. Pierce, 53, served for a year on the citizens committee studying the general plan, eight months of that as chairman. The council is now on the verge of adopting that plan.

Mrs. Pierce also was the organizer of the Corte Madera Town Meeting of 1972. She was elected in March to the board of directors of the Marin Conservation League and has served on several county committees studying local planning.

She and her husband, Edward, a certified public accountant, have four children.

She holds a master's degree in community health planning from the University of California in Berkeley, which she earned in 1971 after quitting a job as a regional analyst for the Office of Economic Opportunity in San Francisco.

"The main thing the planning commission has to do is to try to come up with the zoning ordinances that will make the general plan work," she said. "There will be a lot of hard work, a lot of homework. It's going to be a learning process for me for quite a while."

Mrs. Pierce said she brings no special expertise to the board, except "an interest in citizen input." She differs from Thompson, an architect who said one of the reasons for his appointment was that nobody else on the commission could read blueprints.

Thompson, 35, is vice president and director of design for Gensler and Associates, a San Francisco architectural firm. He holds a bachelor of architecture degree from the University of Illinois.

Thompson said recent developments have brought about "a revolution in the profession" of architecture and construction. "The environmental impact statment is the court's way of teiling the government to be more responsive. The whole industry is coming around.

"It's going to be fascinating to see the changes. The quality level of what's built is going to be immensely higher all of a sudden."

Thompson has lived in Corte Madera since 1969. He and his wife, Darlene, have one son.

Thompson worked on an ad hoc citizens group preparing the general plan — the group which preceded Mrs. Pierce's formally appointed committee. He is a former president of the Christmas Tree Hilldwellers Association.

Arts Groups Get Grants Of $9,286

Four Marin performing arts groups have received a total of $9,286 in grants from the California Arts Commission, with the largest grant — $3,865 — to the Inverness Music Festival.

Also receiving money are three San Rafael-based groups: The Pacific Regional Ballet Association, $2,000; Marin Symphony Association, $1,921, and Marin Civic Ballet Association, $1,500.

The money to the Inverness festival, an annual summer event, will help support the group's expanded musical program which includes performances around the county.

The symphony association will use the funds for both the regular symphony program and its three youth orchestras.

The Pacific Regional Ballet Association will use the grant for choreography, while the Marin ballet troupe plans to expand its concert schedule.

The grants are part of $424,709 apportioned by the commission to 135 groups in the state.

Trapped Air Suspected As Cause Of Crib Death

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Crib death, the silent, baffling killer of 15,000 American infants each year, may be caused by trapped air in a baby's windpipe, two michigan researchers say.

Karl J. Kadlub, a Battle Creek clinical psychologist, and his son, K. Gregory Kadlub, a pre-med student, discounted the prevelant theories blaming crib death on a lightning-fast virus, respiratory ailment or birth defect.

In this month's edition of the Michigan Medical Society's Journal, the Kadlubs said the sudden infant death syndrome is a mechanical obstruction of the central air passage by a large mass of air released from the stomach and trapped in the pharynx.

The child dies of natural causes much as a man might choke to death on a piece of steak lodged in his throat, they said.

"One of the most powerful arguments against a disease hypothesis is the fact that nobody has ever observed such a death taking place while the infant was held in its mother's arms, when the head is properly supported, while it was being played with and shifted in position or in any of the myriad of situations that any family might spend in direct contact with a child," they said in their paper.

In an interview, the elder Kadlub said the concept struck him while he was discussing an unrelated medical article he had read with his wife.

"My wife, in this free association thing she does, said 'I was never comfortable laying a baby down without burping it,'" Kadlub said. "It just rang a bell."

His colleagues —particularly women —have reacted very favorably to the theory.

"It makes sense to women," Kadlub said. "to any woman who has nursed or burped a baby, it instinctively sounds right."

The kadlubs said the chain of events ending in crib death is triggered by infant feeding, when a healthy, hungry baby swallows large amounts of air and considerable force may be generated to expel resulting burps.

They theorize that a large bubble of gas is forced from the stomach into air passages which may already be partially blocked due to the child's sleeping position.

It then becomes trapped in the windpipe, preventing fresh air from entering and causing him to suffocate.

The babies, they said, probably do not die in their sleep, as was previously assumed.

"It is more likely that once the throat is paralyzed by a massive rush of gas from the stomach, the child is awakened by pain as well as the need for air, it struggles as best it can and strangles silently —unable to draw in air because of its inability to expel the gas pressing against the juncture where both meet."

Vandals Hit Food Outlets

Rock-tossing vandals smashed windows at two Petaluma drive-in food outlets over the weekend, causing more than $1,000 damage.

Worst damage was at the Kentucky Fried Chicken store at 701 East Washington Street, where two five-by-four-foot plate glass windows were shattered.

Also damaged in the attack, which occurred last Saturday or early yesterday, was a life-sized fiberglass statue of the restaurant's founder, Colonel Sanders. Damage was estimated at $700.

A Jack-In-The-Box hamburger stand at 837 East Washington Street was stoned at around 2 a.m. yesterday, resulting in about $450 damage to two large windows.

A BLUEPRINT FOR THE FUTURE OF THE CITY OF SAN RAFAEL?

This proposal for the redevelopment of San Rafael — which envisions a small, subregional shopping center at the foot of Fourth Street — has generated more interest among city officials and businessmen that three other "sketch plans" drafted by consultants. City councilmen, sitting as the redevelopment agency board, will view sketch plan three, as well as alternative plans, when they meet at 8 p.m. today in city hall. At issue is the future of the City of San Rafael.

Blinder To Push Drug Law Effort

San Anselmo Mayor Martir G. Blinder again will try to rally his city council colleagues to support a resolution to state legislature urging decriminalization of drug use when the council meets tomorrow at 8 p.m. at city hall.

He first urged the council to take that stand Sept. 10, but council members sidestepped the plan, and instead sponsored a drug abuse seminar Nov. 9 to learn more about the problem.

In other matters, the council will consider a preliminary ordinance prepared by City Atty. Hadden W. Roth that would prevent food markets from operating all night. The regulation is the result of neighbors' complaints of nocturnal disruptions at the Stop 'N' Go Market, 807 San Anselmo Avenue. Blinder had labeled the market "a pig sty."

The council also will consider reducing from three to one the number of complaints needed to take action against pets bothering residents by barking, roaming or other activities.

New Era Seen In Philippines

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mrs. Imelda Marcos, first lady of the Philippines, said yesterday the Philippines have entered a new era.

"With the Communist world so close and the capitalist right at home" —a reference to the U.S. naval bases in the Philippines —"the people must take strength and examples from their past in order to build the future honestly," Mrs. Marcos told the Mexican news agency Notimex.

The former Miss Universe, who holds a doctorate in history, was interviewed during a tour of the pyramids of Teotihuacan. She is in Mexico on a three-day official visit.

Chou's Role In 1936 Chiang Kidnap

TAIPEI (UPI) — The mastermind of a plan to kidnap Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in 1936 in an effort to change the course of Chinese history, told for the first time yesterday how he contacted Chou En-lai before he launched the coup.

Chang Hsueh-liang, known as the young marshal and leader of the northeast army at the time of the coup, abducted Chiang Dec. 12, 1936, in an effort to force Chiang to negotiate with the Chinese Communists and to join with the Communists to defend China against Japanese aggression.

In a memoir made public yesterday at the caucus meeting of the ruling Kuomintang, Chang recalled that he first met Chou secretly in a cathedral in Yenan. They talked for two to three hours and Chou pledged to support Chiang's leadership in fighting against the Japanese, he said.

"I felt very pleased after my talks with Chou En-lai and thought we could from hence achieve internal peace and fight jointly against the Japanese," he said. "Looking back now, my thoughts then were really stupid, foolish, naive and ridiculous."

Chang, 74, now lives in seclusion in surburban Peitou near Taipei. He consented to Premier Chiang Ching-kuo to make his memoir public yesterday at the fifth Plenary Session of the 10th Central Committee of the Kuomintang.

Chang said he was influenced by Communist propaganda and believed then Chiang should not wage a civil war against the Communists.

He said he was sorry after he kidnaped Chiang. He then sent a telegram to Chou to go to Sian, in northwest China, for consultation.

"From then on, Chou became the main figure of the Sian incident," he said. . . "I have led to such a tragic disaster of China. I do not know when this grave misfortune would end, and this is all my fault."

The excerpts of the memoir however did not mention how Chiang was released on Dec. 25 and how Chang flew with him from Sian to Nanking.

Chiang in reading excerpts of the memoir said the Sian incident is a clear example of Communist propaganda tricks.

"The tricks the Communists are playing now are the same as they used before," Chiang said. "That is they are attacking the weak points of a person, the psychological weak spots, and they are taking advantage of every possible opportunity."

This 4-seater Coupe is not built on a typical assembly line. The hand-finished workmanship that is the 450SLC simply is not compatible with speedy assembly lines or automation.

The cockpit gives the same feeling of pure design efficiency of an Apollo space capsule. That's the view of a noted automotive writer who has sat in the command seats of both vehicles.

Step on the accelerator. Instantly, you'll feel the response of an unusual engine. There isn't another like it in any other make of passenger car.

Only a few will be able to own a 450SLC Coupe. A vanishing breed of motor car, which, at about $20,000, is very expensive. What awaits this fortunate few is an extraordinary experience.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY — A ferris wheel filled with joyous youngsters twirls in the front yard of the Joseph A. Perry home on Montecito Road in San Rafael. It was all part of Perry's birthday celebration Saturday.

46th Birthday Party Offers Fun For All On Ferris Wheel

By BARBARA HOSMER

Saturday was Joseph A. Perry's 46th birthday and instead of the usual party he wanted to do something different.

"So we did this," said a beaming Perry, gazing up at the carnival-sized ferris wheel whirling above his front steps.

"I loved these things as a kid and never had enough money to ride more than once. Yeah, it costs a lot, but if you can afford it, why not?"

After several twirls with a load of shrieking, delighted neighbor children, the wheel was stopped for Perry and his wife to climb on for their first ride. Their children, Lisa, 6, and Andrew, 5, were among the 20 already aboard.

None of the neighbor children could quite believe that real ferris wheel was whirling them over their houses on a bayside hilltop on Montecito Road in east San Rafael.

"I looked up and saw it over the hill — wow!" one of the older boys exclaimed.

"Isn't this fun," Perry commented to a neighbor as they watched the children grip the safety bar and call to each other.

Trucking the ferris wheel from Redwood City to Montecito, a narrow and curving road flanked by high foliage, wasn't easy. The rig was trucked in and backed into position at the Perry's front walk. Then it took the two attendants another three hours to set up the guy wires and unpack and attach the seats. But by 3 p.m. the youngsters were loaded on. And Perry kept it going until 9 p.m.

Perry was sure he'd get his $500 worth, and his wife was pleased.

"Isn't it great to see so many smiling faces," she said from the top of the steps as the wheel started up.

Quite a sight, neighbors agreed.

"It goes so fast," said several children.

"It looks brand new," commented one, gazing at the blue wheel with red, orange and yellow seats.

The ferris wheel was the spectacular but the birthday party — a neighborhood affair — also included plenty of food and a magic show.

Rail Cars Hang Above Freeway

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Seven Penn Central coal cars jumped the track on a railpass over Interstate 75 early today and are in danger of falling into the southbound lane underneath the overpass, police said.

Officials said the seven coal cars are leaning against guardrails and there is a "50-50" chance the steel railing could give way."

Penn Central crews were at the scene to clear the tracks.

Police said there were no injuries.

Food Price Rise Tops Predictions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Food prices could end up 15 per cent higher for the year —about double the rise forecast, according Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz.

Butz said yesterday that food costs would continue upward next year and that Americans would just have to have to pay more or eat less.

"I think 1974 will end up above 1973 on the average around 14 to 15 per cent increase," Butz said in a televised interview (ABC's "Issues and Answers").

"There will be some more (price increases) next year. Not in that magnitude, but I think there will be some more."

He also said he thought controls on food prices would be "counterproductive" because "people don't abide by them; they don't work."

Butz defended President Ford's refusal to accept a proposal by the U.S. delegation to the recent World Food Conference in Rome for an additional one million tons of emergency food aid for hungry nations.

"You can't make a decision like that in vacuum. You have got to take into consideration the impact o the budget," he said.

"You have got to consider the available supplies in this country which are tight. You have to consider the impact on the cost of living in this country."

He said the United States should decide where its extra food goes "case by case, country by country."

Butz also indicated he would favor trading with Cuba.

Cuba, a major sugar producer, would "make an excellent rice market".

Butz also branded the predicted dollar a pound cost for sugar "too doggoned high-priced" and said the answer was more production.

"Somehow or other, when you get a little more money, you want to eat better and one of the things you turn to first is sweets and it doesn't take much increase in the consumption of sweets to increase the demands tremendously."

Reserves Fading

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco Bay area is expected to run out of existing aggregate reserves between 1985 and 2000, according to reports by the U.S. Bureau of Mines.

No Sugar Conspiracy, Simon Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Treasury Secretary William E. Simon today said there was no evidence —as a New York congressman claimed —that the Soviet Union and oil-rich Arab nations are conspiringto drive up the price of sugar.

"I think there are plain indications on the world market in London and elsewhere of the Russians and Arabs moving in and locking up as much sugar as they can," Rep. Peter Peyser, R-N.Y., said at a two-day hearing into the price of sugar that has gone up 400 per cent in the last year.

He said there is "not a great deal of difference from the oil situation (which) the Arabs have put us in, to the great delight of their Russian friends."

But Simon said the government has investigated recent heavy buying of sugar on the world market by the Soviet Union and Arab countries to see if there was a conspiracy.

"That is one idea we can dismiss immediately," Simon said.

There have been reports recently that the Arabs were using profits from increased oil prices to speculate on the world sugar markets. Peyser said he had information that the Soviet Union and the Arabs "to some degree have succeeded" in driving up sugar prices. He said:

"This is a deliberate effort to further create financial problems for the poorer countries in the world and generally lend to the economic crisis that many countries are facing due to the price of oil."

Simon, however, said:

"Many of you may be aware that the Soviet Union and some of the Arab nations have recently placed large orders for sugar. Because of our concern over prices we have studied these purchases carefully and I can report to you this morning that we can find no evidence of a conspiracy between them to hoard or drive up the price of sugar."

The Council on Wage and Price Stability called the hearings to investigate the sources of the 400 per cent price rise in sugar during the past year.

A staff report from the council said the basic reason sugar prices are high "is that since crop year 1970-71 the world has consumed more sugar than it has produced and, hence, has seriously depleted its stocks.

"Because we in the United States import about one-half of the sugar we consume, we are directly affected by this worldwide problem."

The report added that the outlook for prices over the short run is not encouraging because the supply-demand situation "will probably remain very tight for the next year or two at least."

Meeting Moved Up

The Alto-Richardson Bay Fire District board's regular meeting, scheduled for Thursday, will be held instead tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the district firehouse, according to Chief Carl O. Heynen Jr.

Peace Force Plea Planned By Waldheim

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim flew today to Damascus to try to persuade President Hafez Assad to maintain a U.N. peace-keeping force on the Golan Heights between Israel and Syria.

The term of the U.N. force expires at midnight Saturday. Syria has not said whether it will renew the mandate but Israeli dispatches from Washington said Moscow assured American leaders at the Vladivostok summit meeting of Syria's intention to renew the term for an unspecified period.

Waldheim will fly to Tel Aviv tomorrow to discuss extension of the U.N. mandate with Israeli officials, it was announced in Tel Aviv. He originally had planned to drive across the rain-soaked Golan truce zone from Damascus.

Seven U.N. inspection teams toured the 16-mile wide Israeli forward zone yesterday at Syria's express request for possible violations of the separation of forces agreement following Israel's declaration of a military alert until the Saturday deadline.

Israel said today its security forces smashed a Syrian-backed Arab guerrilla network in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan and arrested 28 persons.

The crackdown came in the wake of widespread disturbances in the West Bank in which hundreds of persons had been arrested on charges stemming from anti-Israel demonstrations and strikes.

Nixon Exam Not Certain For Tonight

LONG BEACH (UPI) — The head of the three-doctor panel sent to check Richard Nixon's health for a report to the Watergate cover-up trial says there will be no examination tonight if the former president is too sick.

If the check-up is begun and it appears to be aggravating Nixon's illness they will cut it short, Dr. Charles A. Hufnagel said yesterday.

However, he said, the panel probably will have to see Nixon sometime to carry out their mission.

Hufnagel and two other physicians arrived yesterday on orders from U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica in Washington to determine whether Nixon is really too sick —as his doctors say —to give testimony in any form for use at the trial.

"We would like to spare Mr. Nixon all the stress that is possible," Hufnagel told reporters on arrival.

The doctors planned to start by reviewing Nixon's medical records at Long Beach Memorial Hospital with Dr. Eldon B. Hickman, who operated on Nixon almost four weeks ago.

They planned to analyze the conclusion by Nixon's personal physician, Dr. John Lungren, that Nixon is endangered by even small amounts of stress.

Lungren said even friendly conversation causes Nixon's blood pressure to shoot up, and in combination with his other ailments and medication —his blood is chemically thinned to prevent clotting —Nixon could be endangered by any stressful confrontation, not only giving testimony, even in writing, but by the medical exam itself.

"If after examining the data, we would feel that (Lungren's conclusion) were true, we would so state and not proceed," Hufnagel said.

Injured Novatan Off Critical List

A 20-year-old Novato man — injured Friday when a car in which he was riding overturned on Bel Marin Keys Boulevard near Novato — has been removed from the critical list and is now reported in serious condition at Marin General Hospital.

Jonathan Brendon Larsen suffered head injuries in the accident which occurred about midnight, a hospital spokesman said.

Greyhound Buses Roll Once More

PHOENIX (UPI) — Greyhound buses — mostly empty — were rolling again today.

The strikers won pay raises of about 16 per cent over three years.

Negotiators prodded by a federal mediator reached agreement at midday yesterday. It will take until Dec. 18 for the 16,000 strikers —represented by 30 unions —to finish voting on ratification, but union leaders predicted a yes vote.

Passengers trickled back to the Greyhound terminals, either unaware that the strike had ended or reluctant to change alternate plans made earlier.

The strike threw a burden of thousands of unexpected passengers onto Amtrak, the rail passenger agency, and Continental Trailways.

"Business is very slow, less than half of what it would ordinarily be," said Marcantonio Perales, Greyhound's assistant Los Angeles depot manager.

At the station in Phoenix, only blocks from where the settlement was negotiated, there were only three persons waiting for buses more than eight hours later, and only two had left on earlier buses. Details of the contract were not made public, but a source close to the negotiations said the offer generally involves raises of 6 per cent in the first year, and 5 per cent in the second and third.

The pay agreement is complex because the bus line's employees fall into so many categories.

Also, there is no single base pay rate for Greyhound drivers, who are paid according to a complicated formula involving minimum daily runs, mileage, and the type of route driven, with different rates for local, suburban and inter-city service.

'WHOLE EARTH EPILOG'

Only Because A Need Was There

By PAUL LIBERATORE

After burning our bridges we reported before the Throne to announce, "We're here for our next terrific idea." The Throne said, "That was it."

—Stewart Brand

If it was such a great idea once, it could be again.

The first great idea was the "Whole Earth Catalog," billed as an "access to tools" and snatched up primarily by inhabitants of the counter-culture hungry to know more about their environment and themselves and where to get the information.

The second is the "Whole Earth Epilog," now in the bookstores after a year in production in a scabrous former crab shack on Sausalito's Napa Street Pier.

The epilog embodies a similar format but contains new and updated information, beginning on page 450 where its predecessor left off.

On its large, tabloid pages (printed on paper that resembles newsprint but is more durable) is information ranging from where to get the best sex manuals to how to do timber walling, wattle and daub infill (that's under "building.")

The creator behind both these compendiums is Stewart Brand, a former member of Wavy Gravy and Ken Kesey's Merry Pranksters whose focus evolved from the LSD hijinks of the 60s to mostly serious study of natural systems and an "ecology of the mind."

In addition to the updated information, one of the big differences in the epilog is that it is obviously more political than the catalogue.

There is a section this time on "Black Interest," written and compiled by Robert Chrisman and Robert Allen, editors of "Black Scholar" magazine, also a Sausalito-based publication.

Communist China occupies another space in a piece by Orville Schell, a member of the Paradise Valley farming collective in Bolinas.

The material in the epilog is more sophisticated as well. "Bucky Fuller saying domes are good doesn't cut it anymore," Brand said recently. "People want to know where to get a solar collector, about sewers and gardening. The important thing is that the information is available. The work has been done, some by longhairs, some by scientists and some by businessmen."

There is less emphasis on communes and more emphasis on community. "The commune on Ken Kesey's farm," he explained, "became a ghetto. It was horrible. Everyone was using each other. Then people moved back, formed their own households and renewed their friendships. They became citizens."

Since the catalog appeared in 1971, it has sold 1.3 million copies at $5 each. Brand found himself with a whole lot of money, more than he wanted or needed. So he gave it away, almost all of it, through his own foundation, POINT.

With the demise of the catalog, he writes in the epilog, he contracted a case of depression labeled the Greater Whim-Whams, and seemed to be casting about for a new and exciting project.

Then while building a house in Canada, he tried to use the catalog and found much of its information was out of date. No one had taken up where he left off, so it was time to crank up production on the second version of the first great idea.

"We would never have started again if anyone had been doing the same thing well. We had stopped, the thing was deader than a doornail. So we cranked the whole system up."

A staff of 25, including Diana Barich, who pumped much of the energy into the catalog, worked on the Epilog from Sept. 1973 to Sept. 1974.

Some 350,000 copies were run off in the first printing, with 100,000 more expected this month and another 100,000 in January.

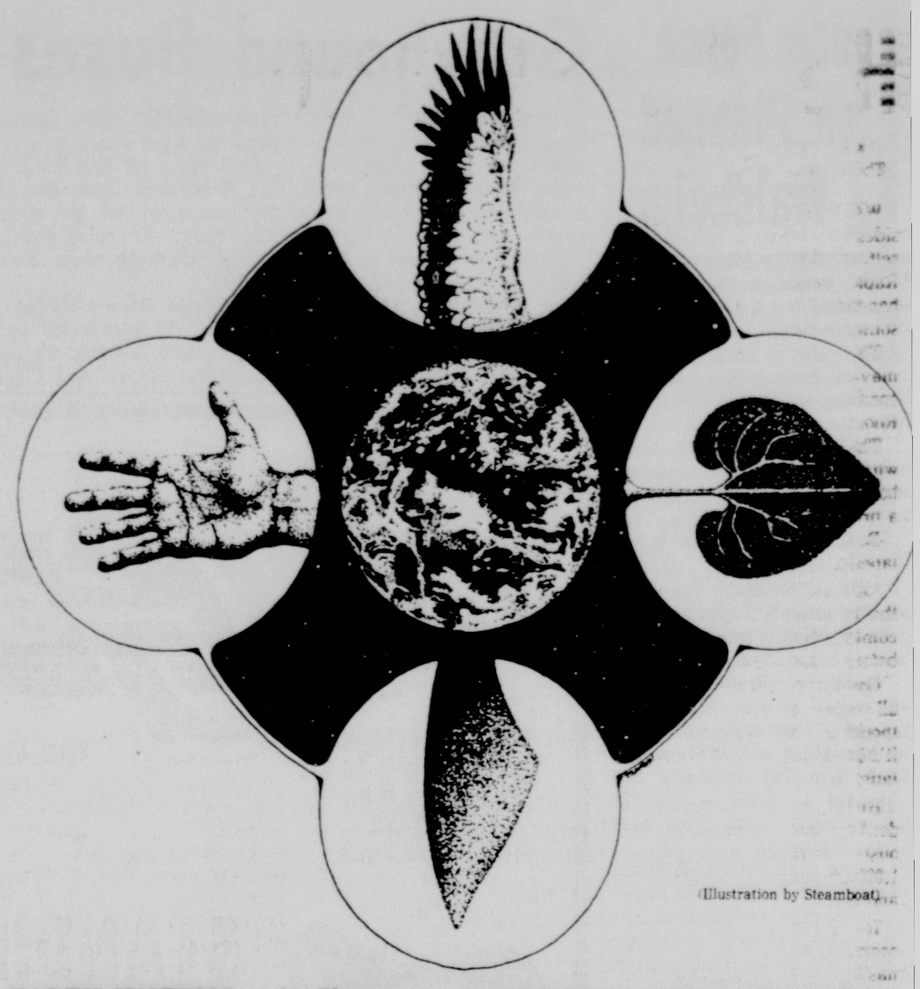

The 320-page epilog sells for a low $4, a price Brand says he is able to maintain by not being "a big, dumb ass New York publisher. The publishing business used to be run by book lovers, now it is run by money lovers."

Brand publishes it himself, the printing done in Wisconsin and the distribution handled by Penguin books.

The Whole Earth people have moved from the pier to the former headquarters of a truck catering service, Harvey's Lunches, on Gate 5 Road, an area teeming with small industries among the bobbing houseboat towns.

There he is working on the winter edition of the CoEvolution Quarterly, a handsome periodical with magazine features and regular updates to both the Catalog and Epilog. Guest editors for the quarterly's fall ediction were members of the Oakland Branch of the Black Panther Party.

Will there be another sequel? "Oh probably," Brand writes in the epilog. "Marin County is my home," he said this week, and here he is likely to stay until the next great idea comes along and takes him somewhere else.

EARTH SYSTEMS — An illustration in Stewart Brand's "Whole Earth Epilog" points out the relationship between living things sharing the planet. The epilog, compiled in a crab shack on the Napa Street Pier in Sausalito, updates the "Whole Earth Catalong," which has sold 1.3 million copies since it appeared in 1971.

North Koreans Call Ford A Warmonger

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — North Korea told called President Ford a warmonger who smelled of gunpowder and said he visited South Korea "only to express open support for the South Korean authorities in the preparations of a war."

North Korean Vice Foreign Minister Li Jong Mok said the Ford visit "revealed without reservation his true colors as a warmonger who gives off a smell of gunpowder and the unchanged ambition of the United States for aggression."

Speaking in the General Assembly's main political committee, Li charged that Ford went to see South Korean President Park Chung Hee "to take him under his wings of protection at a time when the youth and students and patriotic people of all strata in South Korea are waging a fierce, massive antigovernment struggle..."

Delivering a strongly anti-United States keynote address at the opening of the Assembly's Korean debate, Li demanded the withdrawalof all foreign troops from South Korea, and particularly insisted on the immediate removal of the "U.N." label from these troops.

The United States, he charged, was preparing for war by maintaining modern equipment, including nuclear weapons, along the demilitarized zone between the two Korean states.

Army Men Ask Veto On Officers

BERLIN (UPI) — One-third of the soldiers assigned to a U.S. Army artillery unit in West Berlin refused to report for duty today and demanded the right to veto the assignment of officers to the organization.

The strikers, as the soldiers described themselves, called for an immediate Congressional investigation of the situation in C94th Artillery Battery and asked that "a representative from Congress be permanently available to us in Berlin."

A spokesman for the U.S. Army's Berlin Command confirmed that a group of soldiers assigned to the unit refused to answer work call at 7:30 a.m., and had handed in a petition outlining their demands.

The strike represented the escalation of a row that began in August when several soldiers from the C94th and other U.S. Army units in West Berlin set out to defy regulations prohibiting beards.

By last week, the army had brought formal charges against four of the men growing beards and had instituted preliminary investigations against four more, all for refusing direct orders to shave.

During the weekend, the men protesting antibeard regulations learned that Spec. 4 Rufus Thompson, the only black among their group, had been ordered transferred from West Berlin.

Man Found In Store Arrested

Fairfax police yesterday arrested a 24-year-old man on suspicion of burglary and possession of stolen property after they found him inside Food Villa after hours.

Roy Alfred Hockenberry of no known address was booked into Marin County Jail. He was being held in lieu of $3,500 bail to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Police said they responded to a silent alarm at Food Villa, 1966 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, at 1:55 a.m. yesterday, found a broken window and discovered Hockenberry lying in the attic. Hockenberry told officers he was looking for something to eat, police said.

Relocation Costs On Novato Agenda

The Novato City Council will seek ways to cut the cost of relocating residents displaced by Civic Center land acquisition when it meets at 8 p.m., tomorrow at Grace Lutheran Church, 1787 Grant Avenue.

After learning last week that relocation costs for four tenant families on two parcels was estimated at $13,880, the council asked for a report from the state's right-of-way agent on relocation costs.

He Puts Polish On Presidential Jokes

By PETER C. STUART
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Besides WIN buttons, do-it-yourself breakfasts and a Grand Rapids twang, Gerald R. Ford has brought to the White House something else: humor.

This direct Midwesterner may be the most avid stand-up comedian to "play" the Blue Room since Abraham Lincoln.

Thus it's no joke that, along with his own sense of humor, he has brought to the White House a presidential joke-writer.

Bob Orben winces at being so labeled.

"All I do," he says, "is add to the President's own humor the comedy construction it needs before an audience."

Comedy construction? "We all come up with humorous thoughts," he explains. "But it's harder to get 1,000 people to laugh, than just one person."

His job is to help the President broaden his appeal humorously speaking, among those 1,000 uncommitted laughers — and voters.

It's a job to which Orben seems to have been born. He has the loose limbs, open face, and expressive mouth of a circus clown without his greasepaint. His raspy voice doesn't talk. It chortles, reminisces, expatiates — entertains.

"The President," he observes with a professional air, "always has had a good sense of humor.

"The essence of his humor is kidding himself. I size up people on their humor. They get extra marks if they're able to take swipes at themselves. Here is a big man physically and in self-confidence. He's not afraid at all to kid himself. There are no subjects about himself, that I've yet come across, that are off-limits.

"Much American humor today is hostile — closer to Don Rickles than Laurel and Hardy or Ed Wynn. But the President is a very loving man. And as a result, he won't do humor that's harmful to someone else. Look at his jokes. When he does one that seems to be at somebody else's expense, that person really is the winner. That's very unusual today."

If Bob Orben speaks like an authority, it's because he is. He has been writing humor for 29 years — for a galaxy of comedians; including Red Skelton, Jack Paar, Dick Gregory, Red Buttons, and a clientele of politicians.

He left the klieg lights and canned laughter behind to come to Washington with Ford's administration, working full-time as a "part-time consultant. Writing for the President, he assures a questioner, is much different from writing for, say, Red Skelton.

"When you write for show business, you write a pound of jokes, and the star picks the ones he wants to use. Here it's different." Instead of concocting the humor itself, he's "bearing out the President on his humor." Then he merely polishes.

Take, for example, that widely quoted Ford jibe at his own ex-football center's dancing talent. It originated, not from his jokewriter, but from a presidential reminiscence with Orben during a recent campaign flight aboard Air Force One.

By the time the presidential party reached Des Moines, Orben, who makes productive use of the isolation of such flights to exchange ideas with his boss, had a humorous anecdote ready for the President's luncheon speech.

Orben reckons Ford, in three months as President, has progressed "from an average speaker to quite a good speaker," but disclaims any credit.

"The difference isn't me. It's the office. When you achieve such enormous responsibility and success, you suddenly become 10 times taller, and your capability becomes greater."

In American politics, that ability — to bring off a good joke — may be more than just a frivolous gift. "If you don't have a sense of humor," he contends "as an American you're one down."

And amid the strains of the presidency, he figures it may even be the saving grace. "If you don't bend in difficult situation, you break. Humor is one of the great lubricants to keep you from breaking."

So it was in Bob Orben's own life. Growing up on the sandlots of New York, he was, by his own admission, "a terrible ball player" and a "nonleader type." But he discovered a knack for making others laugh.

"We all get into this business as a coverup," he muses. "Most people who make a lifetime of it, use it as a means of making up for some real or imagined dificiency."

His winding road to the White House began in a dingy New York magic shop.

After a disastrous fling as a magician ("I suffered stage fright and shook so bad I couldn't do the dirty work"), at 18 he took a job in a magic shop demonstrating tricks to magicians, jugglers, and comedians.

Developing an interest in comedy material, he discovered a crying need for a book of jokes, apart from the standard compendiums of tired standbys, specifically designed to be performed. So he wrote one. "The Encyclopedia of Patter" (comedy monologues) sold 20 printings. Forty-three other books have followed.

His specialization in one-line jokes led him, more or less maturally, into political work.

"One-liners," he explains, "are the essence of modern American humor — short, sharp humor, an economy of words. It's what every politician tries to get into his speeches."

One of them was Gerald Ford. Seeking help on a humorous speech to Washington's Gridiron Club while Republican leader of the House of Representatives in 1968, he was directed to Orben, and the relationship was forged.

Besides his presidential client, other politician-humorists who merit the Orben professional seal of approval include all the Kennedys ("very facile"); former Republican presidential candidate Barry Goldwater; U.S. Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona, darkhorse Democratic presidential contender; and ex-New York Mayor John V. Lindsay ("probably too good — he always wanted to be a stand-up comic").

His own politics? "I've always leaned toward the Republicans," he says.

Ninety-five per cent of his work at the White House, in fact, is devoted to the serious side of presidential speeches. But he rates it as the easier part of his job.

"It's harder to get an audience to laugh," he says, "than to applaud."

President Ford might readily agree.

Oil Cut Seen

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada has moved to protect its dwindling oil reserves with a plan which will cut oil exports to the United States by 100,000 barrels a day on Jan. 1 and possibly halt all exports within 10 years.

Wallace Unsure About '76 Race

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace, who ran for president on a third-party ticket in 1968, says he is still undecided whether to run in 1976.

He did not say he would not run.

"I haven't made up my mind," Wallace said yesterday. "Idon't know whether I'm going to run or not, and I haven't made any plans to run in any primaries."

PRESIDENTIAL JOKESTER — Bob Orben, presidential joke writer, has been writing humor for 29 years and has done material for a galaxy of comedians. His material for the President, Orben claims, is not original, but just polish applied to Ford's own humor. (Christian Science Monitor Photo)

Ford Humor Usually Is Aimed At Himself

"So much has happened in these few months since you were kind enough to ask me to speak here today. I was then America's first instant Vice President — and now, America's first instant President. The United States Marine Corps Band is so confused, they don't know whether to play 'Hail to the Chief' or 'You've Come a Long Way, Baby!' "

Aug. 30, Ohio State University, Columbus

"As you might imagine, I don't quite agree with those who have called me the Evel Knievel of politics . . . but I do think I have proven beyond a shadow of a doubt that you don't need a pool at the White House to get into deep water!"

Sept. 18, Washington Press Club.

"They say you can always tell how good a (golf) player is by the number of people in the gallery. You've heard of 'Arnie's Army?' My group is called 'Ford's Few.'

"I've figures it out. My problem is, I have a very wild swing. I'll tell you how wild my swing is. Back on my home course, they don't yell 'Fore!' they yell 'Ford!'

"You know all those Secret Service men you've seen around me? When I play golf, they get combat pay!"

Sept. 11, World Golf Hall of Fame, Pinehurst, N.C.

"You know, when I saw this grand old ballroom, it brought back so many happy memories of Benny Goodman, Tommy Dorsey, and Woody Herman. When Betty and I were courting, we used to go out dancing to the music of these big bands. We had a problem, though. Betty had studied modern dance, and I was a former football player. She never really came right out and said I was a poor dancer; she's much too kind for that. But she did have a rather interesting theory as to why I played center rather then quarterback. She said it's one of the few positions on a football team where you don't have to move your feet!"

URBANA, Ohio (AP) — U.S. Rep. Clarence J. Brown Jr.'s 19th century home was damaged by an apparent gas explosion yesterday, authorities said. No one was injured.

The Ohio Republican and his wife were in Washington at the time. Tenants who live on the top floor of the three-story house were also away.

TOO MUCH TURKEY? — If there's turkey left over from Thanksgiving Day, treat the family to two alternatives to the turkey sandwich. Shepherd's Pie, left, combines the meat and leftover gravy covered with mashed potatoes. Old-fashioned turkey soup is an easy way to use every last bit of meat.

Two Ideas For Leftover Turkey: Pie, Soup

What to do with all that turkey?

A person can take only so many turkey sandwiches so this year add the meat to these specially created turkey recipes — Shepherd's Pie and Old-Fashioned Turkey Soup.

SHEPHERD'S PIE

4 cups chopped cooked turkey
1½ cups turkey gravy
1 cup chopped celery
½ teaspoon salt
3 cups mashed potatoes
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 egg, slightly beaten

Mix together turkey, gravy, clery and salt. Turn into (7¾ x 11½ x 1¾-inch) baking dish. Beat together mashed potatoes, onion and egg. Spread over turkey mixture. If desired, reserve some potato to force through pastry bag to form fluting trim. Bake in 400 degree oven 30-35 minutes or until lightly browned. Makes six to eight servings.

OLD FASHIONED TURKEY SOUP

1 turkey carcass, broken up
3 quarts water
1 tablespoon salt
1 bay leaf
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
2 cups sliced celery
2 cups sliced carrots
1 cup sliced onion
1 cup diced white turnip
2 cups diced potatoes
¼ cup chopped parsley

In a large saucepot combine turkey carcass, water, salt, bay leaf and Worcestershire sauce. Brint to boiling point. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, for 1½ hours. Remove carcass; pull off any meat remaining on bones. Discard bones. Return meat to saucepot. Stir in celery, carrots, onion and turnip. Simmer, covered, for 30 minutes. Add potatoes. Simmer, covered, until vegetables are tender, about 30 minutes. Stir in parsley. Season to taste with salt. Serve with corn bread sticks, if desired. Yield: six portions.

Big Debate Over New Beef Grading

By LUCIA MOUAT
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — America has become a nation of beef eaters.

The big question now being debated in consumer and livestock industry circles is what effect, if any, the U.S. Agriculture Department's proposed changes in beef grading standards will have on meat prices and U.S. eating habits.

While America currently has what many insist is an "oversupply" of beef, many cattle slated for market have been slaughtered at a younger age than usual or kept grazing longer on grass to avoid the high cost of being fattened on grain.

Though consumers complain about soaring prices at the supermarket — beef prices have shot up 88 per cent in the last decade — producers complain every bit as loudly that they are not nearly covering their cost. C. W. (Bill) McMillan, executive vice-president of the American National Cattleman's Association, says feedlot operators have out-of-pocket losses of about $100 a steer.

While many supermarket shoppers have opted for cheaper sources of protein, such as cheese, the facts are that U.S. per capita consumption of beef, however costly, is up to 116 pounds a year, more than double what it was 20 years ago.

Though hardly billed as the end-all answer to the price problems plaguing both the beef producer and the consumer, the agriculture department's proposed grading change, announced this fall, is being billed as a step in the "public" interest.

Grading, intended as a measure of beef quality, is a voluntary service which the USDA has been performing for a fee paid by packers for close to half a century. Roughly 80 per cent of the meat sold in retail stores now is stamped USDA "prime," "choice," or "good."

What the agriculture department, in effect, wants to do is relax its standards for the top quality grades — prime and choice — by letting leaner meat qualify.

One of the traditional measures of quality — which the Agriculture Department describes as tenderness, flavor, and juiciness — has been marbling or flecks of fat within the meat. Generally the federal view has been that the older the cattle, the tougher the meat, unless increased marbling is required to compensate.

The agriculture department says the grading change is prompted by suggestions from consumers, who want less fat in their meat, from the beef industry, and from the government's own research.

The department claims that agriculture studies show for the first time that if cattle are under 30 months old, increased age doesn't significantly affect beef quality. Thus the USDA wants to tone down the marbling requirements for the top two grades without sacrificing quality.

For producers, well aware that "choice" beef is the shoppers' favorite, this would mean that cattle could be slaughtered at a younger age to qualify for that grade and that feed time on expensive grains could be cut down accordingly.

"We think we could safely cut about 15 days of food," says McMillan, who explains that under current prices that would be a saving of about 400 pounds of grain or $22 per cow.

Instead of tenderness through marbling, they'll be getting it through youth," comments Clarence Adamy, president of the National Association of Food Chains, who describes the USDA proposals as "an intelligent move in the right direction."

As part of its grading plan, the USDA also proposes a tighter standard, by slightly increased marbling requirements, on meat graded as "good." The change would narrow the present range of quality within that grade by one-third.

Lastly, the shifts would require that grading take into account only quality and yield — a quantitative measure that shows the proportion of lean to fat and bone. The USDA hopes by the move to make the quality of beef within each grade more uniform as a result.

Some of the strongest consumer criticism has been aimed not at the USDA proposals themselves but at the lack of nutritional information accompanying them. They say they want to know what the changes will mean in terms of less or more protein, for instance.

Public comment is welcomed at the department until Dec. 10. The earliest date when the proposals might become effective, if the desired support rolls in, is February.

Skepticism Expressed Over USDA Plan For New Grading Standards

San Francisco Consumer Action has expressed skepticism about the motivation of the Department of Agriculture in offering new beef grading standards.

According to a release issued by the consumer group, a professor at the San Francisco hearing on the proposed changes estimated that the new ratings would save as much as 5 billion pounds of feed grain each year as a result of shortened feeding times.

Although leaner beef and vast savings in feed are desirable, SFCA officials believe there should be some assurance that the new standards would benefit consumers.

Government and industry officials noted at the meeting that there was no way to know if the savings would ultimately reach consumers. The potential savings to the industry seemed clearly to be the prime motivation for the proposed grading changes, said a SFCA representative.

The group believes the USDA must become more responsive to consumer's needs so that new grading standards will be designed to insure savings to consumers as well as to industry.

Cranberry Fruit Bread

CRANBERRY FRUIT BREAD

(Makes one round loaf)

3 cups fresh cranberries, chopped
1½ cups buttermilk
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon mace
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 cup unsifted whole wheat flour
½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
½ cup sliced blanched almonds
½ cup golden raisins
½ cup chopped candied lemon peel
½ cup chopped candied orange peel
2 tablespoons candied citron

Combine the cranberries with buttermilk. Let stand 30 minutes. Sift together all-purpose flour, baking powder, mace and baking soda. Stir in whole wheat flour. In a large bowl with electric mixer or wooden spoon, beat butter or margarine until soft. Beat in sugar until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. At low speed, mix in flour mixture alternately with buttermilk and cranberries.

With wooden spoon mix in almonds, raisins, lemon and orange peels and citron. Pour batter into a well greased 2-quart casserole or a decorative mold with center hole. Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) one hour, or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool bread in pan on wire rack 5 minutes. Turn out of pan. Cool completely before cutting in thin slices.

Orange Sauce Brightens Squash

Winter squash can be varied by sprinkling with cinnamon or nutmeg or by placing an orange sauce into the cavity before baking.

ORANGE-HONEYED ACORN SQUASH

3 small acorn squashes
¼ cup orange juice frozen concentrate
¼ cup honey
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg, if desired

Cut squashes in half. Remove seeds. Place squashes in a shallow baking pan. Combine orange juice concentrate, honey, and salt. Mix well. Put some of the orange-honey mixture into each squash cavity. Add 1 teaspoon butter or margarine to each squash half. Sprinkle with nutmeg, if desired. Cover pan tightly with aluminum foil to keep steam in and speed cooking. Bake 30 minutes at 400 degrees. Remove foil and continue baking 30 minutes more, or until squash is tender.

Dried Fruits

Cooked dried fruits should be stored in covered containers in the refrigerator and used within a couple of days.

Gelatin Dieting Is Found Faulty

(Last in a series of articles on dieting compiled by the Dairy Council of California from research by the California Dietetic Association.)

The Knox Eat and Reduce Plan — a low calorie diet that also prescribes an envelope of Knox gelatin be taken three times a day — is not recommended by professional dietitians.

The diet is based on wrong information and is lacking in two essential nutrients, thiamin and iron, according to the California Dietetic Association (CDA).

In the CDA pamphlet "A Dozen Diets For Better Or For Worse" the Knox diet is outlined:

Besides cutting calories the dieter must eat an envelope of Knox gelatin three times daily before meals. The reasons given (by Knox gelatin) are that gelatin will dull the appetite and provide extra protein.

"Unfortunately," the pamphlet says, "Knox gelatin has neglected to publicize certain aspects of protein biochemistry.

"The supplemental protein in gelatin is incomplete. When eaten with the diet, which already supplies enough complete protein, the gelatin becomes just extra calories.

In evaluating the diet by the four food group system of balancing diets, the CDA dietitians found an inadequate amount of foods from the bread and cereal group would account for an inadequate supply of thiamin and iron.

According to the pamphlet, the Knox plan supplies only 80 per cent of the daily thiamin need and only 78 per cent of the iron need.

Gingery Apple Rings Make Turkey Garnish

Spiced apple rings are a quick to prepare garnish for the turkey platter.

GINGER APPLE RINGS

4 tablespoons butter or margarine
4 tablespoons honey
½ teaspoon ground ginger
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons lemon juice, freshly squeezed
4 medium apples, unpeeled (Golden Delicious, Pippin)

In medium skillet, melt butter or margarine. Add honey, ginger, cinnamon, and lemon juice. Cook for three to five minutes. Wash, core, and slice apples in ½-inch rings. Cook in honey-butter mixture about four to five minutes, turning twice. Serve with roast turkey as garnish or accompaniment. Makes about 16 apple rings.

BAKED YAMS WITH WALNUT BUTTER

Scrub four yams. Place in a shallow baking pan. Bake in a 350° oven for 35 to 50 minutes; time depends on size of yams. Soften ⅛ pound of butter or margarine to the creamy stage, then stir in ⅓ cup chopped walnuts and a dash of nutmeg. When yams are done, slit them open and ladle in the walnut butter.

Diced Beets

As a relish for beef or fish, mix cold cooked diced beets with sour cream and minced fresh dill or dried dill seeds.

Marin Food Prices Up 2.67 Per Cent

Food prices in Marin increased 2.67 per cent in October according to the first issue of Marin Food Inflation Watch, a monthly publication headed by economist Robert Lee Grant.

Increases for the remainder of the year will average 2.3 per cent because of a 4.7 per cent increase at the wholesale level, added Grant.

Thirty-six items were priced at five Marin supermarkets by publishers, Tamalpais Associates, a research and environmental consulting firm in Tiburon.

The list reports the average price on Oct. 31; the average price on the dates of the previous survey, Oct. 6 and 7, and the percentage of change for the period.

The findings indicate that more grocery prices were reduced than increased (13 down compared to 12 up) and that 11 remained constant. The largest increase occurred in the price of bell peppers (34.3 per cent) and the greatest decrease, red delicious apples (down 23.5 per cent.)

The average grocery bill for all 36 items on Oct. 6 and 7 totaled $35.91 compared with $36.87 on Oct. 31, leaving a monetary increase of 96 cents or 2.67 per cent for the period.

Among those items priced were ground beef, chicken, dairy products, fresh produce and frozen orange juice, tuna, sugar, coffee and soup.

Future issues of the Marin Food Inflation Watch will cover monthly periods and will not include the prices charged at individual supermarkets.

The Independent-Journal will continue to report the findings of the newsletter which will also announce consumer aids for fighting inflation as they are developed.

To order a complete copy of the newsletter write Tamalpais Associates, P.O. Box 464, Tiburon, 94920.

Walnuts, Pecans, Almonds Ready For Season

It's the season for nuts and America's favorite, the walnut, is in good supply.

The walnut is by far the most popular ingredient nut accounting for 46.8 per cent of all store sales. Shelled walnuts were reduced 16.9 cents on one pound packages, vacuum cans were lowered 3.1 cents an eight-ounce and 4.3 cents on four-ounce and in shell one pound packages are 4.9 cents lower than last year.

The almond crop has increased 34 per cent from last year, the largest crop of almonds in California's history. Prices have not dropped accordingly.

Pecans, the second most favorite nut, will be in shorter supply due to a 48 per cent drop in crop yields. Prices will continue to rise.

Chocolate, Apples In This Pudding

This is a pudding that can be served for any festive occasion and all through the chilly months that follow.

The combination of chocolate and apples is irresistable when the serving dish is garnished with little hard sauce apples.

CHOCOLATE APPLE PUDDING

- ⅓ cup shortening
- 1 cup sugar
- 2½ squares (2½ oz.) unsweetened chocolate, melted
- 2 eggs
- 3⅓ cups sifted cake flour
- 2 tablespoons baking powder
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup milk
- 2 teaspoons brandy flavoring
- ½ cup chopped walnuts
- 1½ cups grated raw apples

Cream shortening and sugar. Blend in melted chocolate. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt; add alternately with milk. Add flavoring. Fold in walnuts and grated apples. Spoon into well-greased two-quart pudding mold. Cover mold; set on rack in large kettle. Add enough boiling water to kettle to come ⅓ way up mold. Keep water boiling, adding more if necessary. Unmold on serving plate; surround with "apples" molded from hard sauce. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

To make the hard sauce "apples", use your favorite recipe for hard sauce and shape it into little balls. Brush each side lightly with deluted red food coloring. Insert whole cloves for stems and blossom ends, as shown.

Dip Flavoring

Next time you make an avocado dip you may want to try flavoring it with a little taco seasoning mix.

Men Open Up About Fears, Feelings

By JOAN LISETOR

Ralph was a businessman earning $30,000 a year. He had been out of school for 31 years, when he made a decision to enroll as a full-time student at the College of Marin.

He was berated by some of his friends. "When are you going to stop this nonsense and go back to work," they asked.

He wondered about relating to younger students. How should he dress? Should he let his hair grow longer?

Ralph felt some resentment toward the programs at the college to help reentering women. Where could he go to talk about his anxieties?

He started to recruit other men he met on the campus until he had a small group willing to meet once a week for an hour or so to disucss their feelings.

"The atmosphere is good, and I don't feel any pressure to be here," said Michael, who dropped in for a few minutes at last week's meeting. "Men come across a lot of attitudes. I've been told a lot of things about how to run my life that I didn't think were right. It's really nice to see other people who feel the same way, who are questioning the old, traditional attitudes."

"WE HAVE talked about situations where we have wanted to cry, but as men we are armored against it, it was impossible," said Jason, a member of the group, who at 30 made the decision to go back to school. "Men feel threatened by exposing their feelings to other men."

All of the men agreed it is easier for them to discuss their feelings with women than with other men.

"Men are so much more threatened than women, especially on this campus. They are reluctant to let it all come out. They have so many reservations and, at the same time, are making so many decisions. The problem is what to do with those decisions," Ralph said.

Randy went through a divorce a few years ago. Alcohol had been a contibuting factor to the divorce, so he gave it up and also made some major changes in his lifestyle. The group, he has found, is a good place to discuss those changes.

When the men first started meeting the group was dominated by one man, Ralph said.

"He always came on strong, and we finally called him on it," Ralph said. "He has since realized his dominance was just a cover up for his anxieties. We have gotten angry at one another the last few weeks because we realized we were not being honest with one another."

If one word were used to describe what the men in the group are groping for it would have to be "confidence." While all have an outward appearance of self confidence, it is that false front, "a trip laid on them by society," that they hope to break down.

"THE WOMEN'S movement and other things that are happening are a direct result of increased awareness, people starting to question attitudes," Michael said. "Instead of a mass movement, small groups are getting together."

In the group the men feel secure enought to discuss their fears, fears of touching, fears of homosexuality and fears of failure.

"I want to be me and not threatened by being me. I think that is what most men are looking for," Ralph said.

"Noboby ever gave me a manual and said, 'This is how to be a father. This is how you are supposed to behave'."

The hope of the group is that in the future more men will get together to explore their feelings, but the concept is new, and they have found men, more than women, are reluctant to try a new idea.

"We are pioneers," said Jason., "but we can't get in a covered wagon and go West. The West has already been explored."

New vistas, the man are finding, are within themselves.

Return To Breast Feeding Called For By Nutritionist

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Before leaving for Rome as a delegate to the recent World Food Conference, Harvard nutritionist Jean Meyer was interviewed in New York. He discussed high-cost bottle feeding vs. breast feeding, and what it means for 'third world' mothers and children.)

By RICKY ROSENTHAL
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Harvard nutritionist Jean Meyer wants women "to restore breast feeding to its place; cows' milk is for cows," he said in an interview here.

His call is fortified by international experts who say the cost of wasted human milk around the world may be as high as a billion dollars.

IN RECENT YEARS, "third world" mothers have come to favor the dried-milk baby formulas so popular in the West. But the cost of adopting and absorbing this "urbanized snobbish," including inflationary price rises, according to experts, is unbearable.

For example: in Tanzania, 50 per cent of the daily wage is needed for a trendy new baby formuia; in Chila it's 20 per cent of the daily wage.

The rush to the bottle-fed baby since World War II by the world's mothers — and third world women in particular — is a disquieting development, it was expressed here.

Women in developing countries, experts say, often lack the skills to prepare formula food, hygenically and the milk very often is diluted with unclean water.

PROFESSOR MEYER sees severe forms of malnutrition beginning to surface in babies of the developing world at a n increasingly younger age; instead of deprivatons showing up at 18 months they are making an appearance at the eight-month level.

At the World Health Assembly of the World Health Organization (WHO) in Geneva in May, a resolution was passed recommending "breast-feeding as the ideal feeding" and urged members "to review sales promotion activities on baby foods and to introduce remedial measures, including advertisement codes and legislation."

Henry R. Labouisse, director of the United Nation's Children's Fund (UNICEF) has declared a world food emergency for children, the first such declaration in the organization's history.

So serious is this food emergency that UNICEF predicts that the recent food shortages and economic upheavals could in a very short time affect the future healthful development of from 400 million to 500 million children.

AT PRESENT there are 10 million children in developing countries who suffer from severe malnutrition. They are either severely malnourished or suffering emaciation in which body weight is more than 40 per cent below standard.

Labouisse said: "We should be preparing — for widespread deterioration of nutrition among young children of lower-income families." Out of the 115 countries UNICEF assists, 70 have been adversely affected by the price rises of petroleum, food, and manufactured goods.

He suggested that there be monitoring of actual food and nutrition situations regionally and foster production and stockpiling of important sources of protein for mothers and children, such as vegetables, beans, and the like, along with local action programs.

Suggestions during the discussions of the UNICEF board, which met this past summer, dealt with questions that deeply affect women, in fact the burden of the "population problem" seems to be solely directed toward her responsibility.

"THE ROLE of the father has been neglected," Professor Meyer said. "He is usually pictured as a shadowy figure grabbing protein" (the father is usually fed first in a poor family, because he works, and the child is at the end of this family food chain).

Although Professor Meyer stressed that he wanted "to involve mothers and men as fathers," it was not clear where "father" could make his contribution.

New Cancer Program Born Out Of Her Mother's Death

By BETH ASHLEY

From her own personal tragedy, Margo Martin, 24, of Corte Madera, has fashioned a life's work and a program to make such tragedies more supportable in the lives — and deaths — of others.

Margo's mother died of cancer four years ago. This week she announced a new program in Marin, weekly group discussions for cancer patients and their families who need help in working through the awful disruptions of approaching death.

She calls the program Cancerport. It is sponsored by the American Cancer Society of Marin and is based on eight months of planning by lay persons and health professionals the best ways to provide support for persons facing the crisis of terminal cancer.

The first such group, comprising five cancer patients, was held earlier this month at the Tamalpais retirement residence in Greenbrae.

THE MEETINGS ARE led by Miss Martin and one of two nurses at Marin General Hospital who have been actively involved in organizing the program: Mary B. Walsh, a psychiatric clinical nurse, and Faith Bartlett, director of the continuity of care department of the hospital.

At this initial meeting, said Miss Martin, "we weren't really needed at all, the discussion got going so well. We let them verbalize what was happening. They seemed to get the support they needed not from us but from within the group itself."

Other groups will be set up — for patients and/or their families — on request at a time and place convenient to the persons involved, Miss Martin said.

THE NEW PROGRAM is an outgrowth of Miss Martin's own experiences, which began when her mother was operated on in October of 1969 for a brain tumor. "She seemed to come through it well," Miss Martin recalled, "but the doctors could tell from the pathology report that the brain was not the major site of the cancer. She returned home, but went through months of tests and radiation therapy in hopes of controlling the cancer.

"She put up with it all beautifully. She did a really good job."

In April, Adelaide Martin returned to the hospital for a proctoscopy, and a tumor was discovered in the colon. A colostomy was performed, but she never returned home again. She died in June, under the combined onslaught of recurring brain tumors and pneumonia.

FOR MARGO MARTIN, her mother's illness became a totally absorbing personal journey. Just 19 when the illness was discovered, and living in her own apartment in Kentfield, "I found that I needed to be the supportive person for my family because my mother and father (Frank Martin) were so close. I spent weekends at home, and dropped by in the evenings, and whenever she needed it I drove her to therapy."

The last three months of her mother's illness, Miss Martin quit her job to be at her mother's bedside. She and her father took shifts at the hospital, she during the day, he dinner time and evenings.

In the beginning, the illness seemed unreal: "it was hard to believe this was really happening to us. When mother had her first surgery, and she was afraid she might not survive it, I could only say, 'Of course you will.' It wasn't for a long time that we could accept the fact that she was dying.

"IN THE FINAL DAYS, we found it was all right to talk to each other about what was happening. We took care of unfinished business. We drew closer. We were able to talk about the future and about our love for each other."

Much of what the family experienced took them into totally new psychological territory. "First we were trying to help her deal with the colostomy, which is a very radical disarragement of the body. They we had to try to understand the strange behavior brought on by the returning brain tumors."

Miss Martin said the nursing

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Borrowing Neighbor Adds Load To An Already High Food Bill

DEAR HELEN:

I'm tired of being the "Shop and Save" supermarket for my neighbor: I shop — she saves, by borrowing constantly.

She almost never pays back, but once in a while she'll ask to buy a can of fruit or something. If I charge her the price stamped on the lid, I still lose, because chances are it's a third again higher when I go to replace it.

She's a good person and I don't want to lose her friendship. How do I get it across that with the price of food today, it's hard enough feeding my own family, let alone hers? — BORROWED TO DEATH

DEAR B TO D:

You have three choices:

1. Get as much as you give, that is, check what your neighbor carries on her shelves, and start borrowing.

2. Learn to say "Sorry, I'm fresh out," or "I only have enough for dinner," without guilt.

3. Tell her, "Look, I need some things too: Let's go to the store and stock up." (In her car, if possible.)

Or you can keep a list of borrowed items, ask for repayment, and probably lose a friend. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

While I was on vacation I took a small bag of fresh pears to the breakfast table of my group in a coffee shop. My tablemates were embarrassed and would not accept any of the fruit. Said it was bad social form to carry your own food into a restaurant.

The pears were not meant to replace food ordered. Did I commit a social blunder? — H.

DEAR V.L.: In my book: No! But then I've never been a "What will people think?" addict. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I have a friend I love dearly. The big problem is: How do we avoid eating with her?

Her family has four dogs and four cats and her children handle them. Then they're asked to make a salad or set the table, etc. And they never wash their hands before doing so.

How do I get it across that this is unsanitary? — GERM CONSCIOUS

DEAR G.C.:

If your friend reads the paper — mission accomplished. If not, well, she's a dear friend. Can't you level with her? — H.

PERSONAL to "Will It Work?" — You two go together like Hee Haw and the Boston Symphony. How about a six-months engagement (at least) to test the kind of music you make together? — H.

Bull Has Been In The China Shop

By RON SCHERER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK, N.Y. — The bull this year has not been in the stock market, he's been in the China shop — driving prices for fine furniture, antiques, and paintings steadily upward.

In fact, investors who put their money in paintings, Japanese prints, art nouveau, or old-English furniture do not regret having missed the chance to buy IBM, Polaroid or Avon.

According to the Sotheby Parke-Bernet Galleries, where auctions are held almost every week, daffodil lamps have appreciated 100 per cent in two years; Windsor chairs, 700 per cent in four years; and Japanese prints, 200 per cent in the past year. What is more, many of the items are usable or will add an element of class to a living room or study.

THIS IS NOT to say investing in antiques does not have its pitfalls. It does. Among them are unscrupulous dealers who will overcharge, underestimate, or sell lesser-quality works as if they were of good quality.

Also, not all items continue to appreciate in value. Says Garrick Stephenson, who runs his own gallery in New York and acts as an art consultant for Inverness Counsel, an investment manager, "In some categories we are paying for the speculative binges of the 1960's."

For example, he says, French furniture has been depreciating in value since 1969-70. Also, some of the modern contemporary paintings may have been way overbought. He doubts there will be a lot of demand for "Andy Warhol types of art."

BEARING OUT Stephenson's words was a recent art sale at Sotheby Parke-Bernet which saw bids drop sharply for Impressionists and contemporary pieces. Although billed as a "veritable crash" in art prices, some anaylsts said it was a "needed shake-out."

Likewise, Ellen Bennett, a member of the faculty at the New York School of Interior Design, says potential buyers should do their homework before entering the auction ring or talking to a dealer.

She says she and her husband have both learned over the years to be patient, "waiting for good quality." She stresses that good quality antiques always find a ready market at prices that won't disappoint. Both she and Stephenson agree it is not a bad idea for the individual to have an antique-investment program just like a stock-investment program.

Just as a broker can aid a stock purchaser, a dealer, if honest and blessed with good taste, can aid the antique buyer.

SO FAR this year, says Richard Rush, editorial director of the Art Investment Report, a publication of the Wall Street Transcript, prices have been extremely strong for the quality works. In fact, he comments on a recent sale, "All bidding was enthusiastic — something like the bidding on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange in early 1929."

People are buying for three reasons, Rush believes. "First, they think inflation is out of hand." Second, because of the uncertain economic climate, people are buying something they believe will keep its value. And third, prices have appreciated steeply and consistently.

APPRECIATION HAS been the story behind the art purchases of giant Westinghouse Electric Corporation, headquartered in Pittsburgh. Its collection of approximately 1,270 pieces was bought five years ago for an estimated $400,000. Since then, according to Phil Andrews of Westinghouse, the value has increased 20 or 30 per cent.

Many of the paintings were by relatively unknown artists who have since become more widely followed. Although price appreciation was not Westinghouse's motive for buying the art, it hasn't been a bad investment, officials concede.

Understandably, new buyers, who have not established credit, may be asked to wait until personal checks have cleared before removal of their purchases. This may sometimes be irksome, but it should be borne in mind that the auctioneer has a dual obligation; to protect the interests of the seller as well as to satisfy the buyer.

If you cannot attend the sale in person, you may leave a bid that specifies your limit. A gallery staff member will execute the bid for you and try to buy the lot as cheaply as possible, in competition with other bids. It is suggested that you use the bid slips provided in all catalogs and read the "advice to bidders" printed on the bid slips and in the catalogs.

Gallery Gives Some Helpful Tips For Novices Attending Auctions

By MARILYN HOFFMAN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Collecting is at an all-time high. Appreciation and knowledge of antiques has never run higher. Auction galleries everywhere are doing brisk business, and customers are eagerly acquiring the objects of their choice.

Sotheby Parke-Bernet, Inc., the largest of New York's galleries and one of the most elegant, provides the following helpful tips to those persons who are still novices at auction-going:

Always carefully read the sales catalog and inspect the property you are interested in acquiring. The more you know about it, the better prepared you'll be to bid. Bidders should familiarize themsleves with the "conditions of sale," "terms of guarantee," and glossaries as well.

Check the estimates and if necessary compare them with the prices of similar material available on the market or achieved at recent auctions.

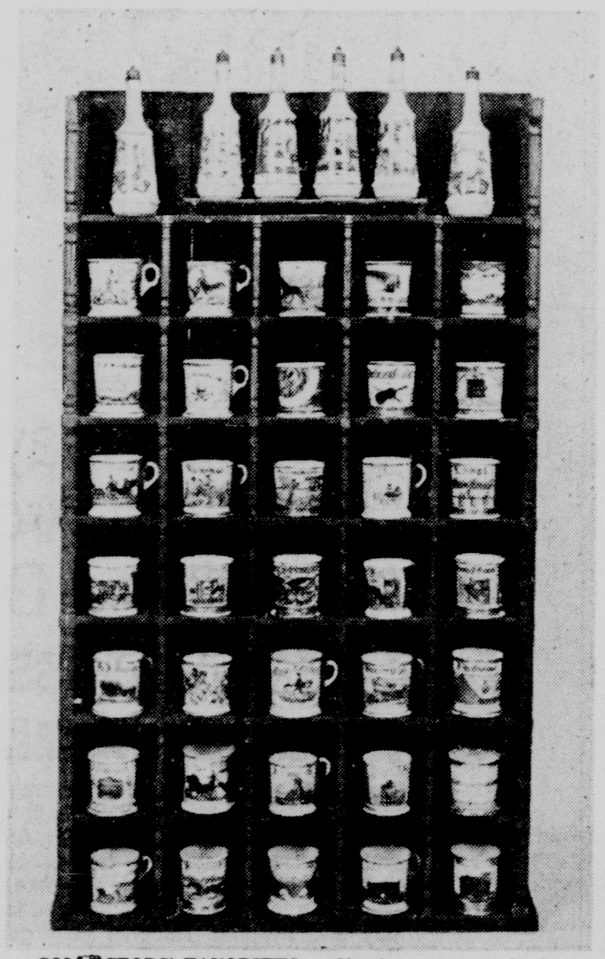

Ask questions and seek advice about the property, if there are still things you'd like to know about it before you decide how much to bid. Staff members of auction galleries will try to help as much as they can.

Try to sit near the auctioneer or one of the gallery attendants so that your bidding signal (normally a simple hand gesture) will be acknowledged.

Don't wait until the last moment to bid. If your are interested in something, try to bid from the beginning and stay with it until you are the successful bidder, of if the price surpasses what you have set as your limit, you "drop out."

If you are the successful bidder, you will be asked to sign a card confirming your purchase. This is for your own protection and becomes part of the official sales record.

When you leave the salesroom, go to the accounting department where your bill will be waiting and you may make arrangements for payment and shipping.

COLLECTORS' FAVORITES — Shaving mugs are barber bottles made from 1875 to 1925 are among the many hot items sought by visitors to auction galleries.

CANCER

staff "gave us a lot of support," but that basically the family was alone in their crisis.

Coping would have been much easier, she feels, if there had been a support group with which to share her feelings, "if I had met someone who could honestly have said, 'I know what you're going through.'"

After her mother's death, Miss Martin worked for a year at a Marin bank. Her thoughts kept returning to the hospital and her experience, and two and one half years ago she became a volunteer aide at Marin General. She signed up in the vocational nursing program at College of Marin and will graduate in December. After that she plans to enroll at Sonoma State College to get a master's degree in psychology. She hopes ultimately for a career as a clinical specialist in the field of cancer nursing, acting as a resource person for patient, doctor and family.

WHILE WORKING at Marin General she trained with nurses Walsh and Bennett, took eight months of training seminars on how to deal with dying patients and their families. Recently she taught such a course for the afternoon staff at the hospital and earlier this month addressed a seminar for nurses in Contra Costa County on "Death — An Intrinsic Part of Living."

The group therapy project in which she is now involved grew from her own experience, and from research with the local cancer society. The need for such groups was amply demonstrated by frequent calls received at the society office from people who "just wanted to talk" about the illness. Other agencies in Marin attested to the need. Miss Martin called together the planning group and Cancerport was the result.

SHE STATES the objectives of Cancerport as follows:

"1. To offer emotional support to patient and family during a stressful time by encouraging a sharing of feelings among group members in a warm and flexible atmosphere.

"2. To encourage problem solving among people with similar needs by sharing successes and failures of other group members.

"3. To encourage rehabilitation through physical, psychological and social support, by referring people with particular needs to appropriate resources in the community (i.e., transportation, American Cancer Society; dressing changes, Home Health Agency, etc.)."

The leaders will not attempt to give medical advice, she said.

It is her hope that through experience, further needs of cancer patients will be identified and the groups' usefullness will be expanded to meet those needs.

Further information about the program is available at the Cancer society office.

Japanese Artist Is Specializing In Painting Portraits Of Pets

Racking your brains for a Christmas gift idea?

If you're a pet owner, artist Yoshiko Fujita has a novel offering: she'll do a charcoal portrait of your animal — dog, cat, bird, horse or what have you — in plenty of time for Christmas.

The cost? Somehwere between $35 and $45.

Mrs. Fujita, who has worked in the fine arts since her student days in Japan, consideres herself a portraitist, and has many portrait commissions to her credit.

But in an attempt to get established commercially in her new home in Novato, Mrs. Fujita has decided to switch momentarily from humans to animals.

"Animals are so like humans," said Mrs. Fujita in still slow English. "Animals are furry, and their noses may be longer, but their expressions, the shadows — they are same, same."

She had a highly successful showing of her work at the Animal Fair at San Geronimo in September, selling a number of animal pictures and contracting to paint several pets in their owners' homes.

She has had no special problems in painting animals thus far, although she laughingly described herself peering from the floor at a small puppy who refused to stay posed on his perch and painting him from an exaggerated crouch.

Her animal portraits are done in charcoal with color highlights and take between two and three hours. She will come to the pet's home, or the pet may pose in Mrs. Fujita's studio in Novato.

Mrs. Fujita learned her craft at art school and with private lessons in Japan. She has traveled extensively in the Far East and has been back and forth to Japan several times since coming here first in 1963. She was married to an American Army captain who was stationed in Japan from whom she has since been divorced, but she has elected to make her home in the United States because she thinks the future here will be better for her son, Steve Drane.

Steve, she explains, is "half-half" — half Oriental, half Caucasian. In Japan Steve, with his mixed blood, would not be as readily accepted as he has been in this country. Now 20, Steve is a graduate of Sacred Heart High School in San Francisco and is an honor student in his junior year at University of California at Davis.

It is for Steve that Mrs. Fujita paints. "I need nothing for myself, I just want to keep him go" to school. As a veterinarian student, Steve, too, is involved with animals.

Mrs. Fujita has exhibited at the California State Fair in Sacramento and is one of 27 California artists whose paintings show at the San Jose Art Museum. She has painted both European style — her portraits for example and a Viking mural at the Plateau VIII in San Jose — and in traditional Japanese style.

Appointments for animal portraits may be made through Ann Rogers, 184 Bret Harte Road, San Rafael, board member of the Marin Animal Medical Care Foundation.

FOR JAM TODAY

"The rule is, jam to-morrow and jam yesterday—but never jam to-day." That's what the White Queen explained to Alice during that famous young Englishwoman's visit Through the Looking Glass. But we are privileged to enjoy jam today. And to enjoy it more served from our English ironstone jam jar, with its traditional silverplate-on-copper cover and spoon. The jar, by Ellis Barker, works very well for jelly, preserves, and honey—as well as jam. And all for just $10.00

"I came to Gloria Marshall very fat and very depressed. I was depressed and I didn't think anyone could help me. The Gloria Marshall counselors were so sweet and beautiful – that was an encouragement. I have succeeded in losing 26½ pounds and 42½ inches. I now weigh 114 pounds. My husband is so happy with the progress, it's like being on a second honeymoon. My two boys are also thrilled with me. This is going to be a terrific Christmas now that I have a new figure.

Thank you Gloria Marshall."

Marin Symphony Season Opens On A Strong Note

By BLAKE A SAMSON

Last night's opening concert of the Marin Symphony's 23rd season was as dynamic and vibrant as one could wish. The orchestra offered fine treatments of Haydn's Symphony No. 6, Bartok's Piano Concerto No. 3 and an exhilarating, masterly Symphony No. 2 by Sergei Rachmaninoff.

Although well supported by soloists Gita Karasik and Charles Meacham, conductor Sandor Salgo deserves much of the credit. Romanticism works best when held back from Dionysian fury by an Apollonian control and balance. Salgo proved to be an Apollonian Romantic.

The Rachmaninoff opens with a full and sweeping solemnity. Salgo built the climbing intensity firmly, layering subtlety on top of subtlety. The great sweeping motions were surging, then longing, almost homesick with native Russian melody.

It is an apt showpiece for the orchestra, shifting from a focus on the fine oboes, to the flutes and horns. How finely Salgo shaped these shifts, bringing them to the forefront, moving from the bright phrases to the dark.

The density and variety of pattern grew even greater in the second movement as the complexities compounded themselves. Witness the little, almost flickerings of tempo that intercut the broader base. Salgo brought the musicians through Rachmaninoff's minefield with stirring interpretation and emotional understanding.

The third movement, held for all its Romantic warmth, might have been too drawn out were it not for Salgo's variety of texture in the strings. The width and breadth only increased the nostalgia of the piece.

The fourth movement, Allegro Vivace, approached a full Dionysian explosion, yet never lost control. When Salgo asked the musicians to stand for a second bow, they stayed seated, applauding him. The tribute was well-deserved.

The program's second offering was Bela Bartok's serene and genteel Piano Concerto No. 3. The clarity of texture, harmonic simplicity and comforting certainty made it an appropriate lead into the Rachmaninoff.

The work was written on Bartok's deathbed and he explained in a letter, how he hoped it would give his wife his own acceptance of the inevitable, "the final completion of the cycle" as he called death.

It has a marvelous two-sided nature, a sad lilt and a happy gait.

The first and third movements were Hungarian in temperament, but pianist Gita Karasik missed the degree of sensitivity and finesse that the "Adagio Religioso" calls for. This is truly the center of Bartok's statement of faith.

However, there are other pianists, of far greater fame, who hammer away at the Allegro Vivance with total abandon. Karasik wisely held back without slighting the necessary virtuosity that Bartok demands.

Salgo set a vigorous — even lightning pace. Some separation problems (that difficult issue of modulating density and loudness) developed, but the orchestra had energy and a crisp sound.

The concert opened with Haydn's Symphony No. 6 "Le Matin", a keen, vital piece, young in its musical structure but exuberant. Its orchestration and ornamentation (particularly in the "Allegro") foreshadows the daring musical invention and virtuoso instrumentation that would later come from Haydn. This ("The Morning") is the first of a three-part cycle ("The Midday", "The Evening") that he composed.

Salgo painted the rather open themes (soft, low, then spreading) with the same minute care shown in the Rachmaninoff. The work demonstrated with distinction the various orchestra soloists, in particular bassoonist Virginia Ojeda and concertmaster-violinist Charles Meacham.

Meacham plays an adagio-andante-adagio that is particularly refined. There could have been a bit more warmth, although this may have been a question of instrument rather than instrumentalist. Meacham's articulation is exacting and stylish.

It was a fine, fine, doubly fine opening.

CORNELIUS RYAN

Book Done, Cornelius Ryan Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Cornelius Ryan suffered two recurrences of cancer and continual pain, but he worked doggedly to complete before death his last book, "A Bridge Too Far," now in the second spot on the best-seller lists.

Ryan, 54, died Saturday night of cancer at the Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research. Memorial services will be held tomorrow afternoon in Ridgefield, Conn.

A resident of Ridgefield, Ryan had been ill since 1970, when he underwent surgery for cancer.

"A Bridge Too Far" was the last of his World War II trilogy that included the best-selling "The Longest Day," a history of D-Day, and "The Last Battle." The final book of the trilogy chronicles the calamitous Anglo-American airborne operation aimed at capturing Arnheim, Holland in September, 1944.

"That fiasco has been swept under the rug so beautifully that that this is the first time it is being told in the United States," Ryan said early this year.

Born in Dublin on June 5, 1920, Ryan's education was limited to the Christian Brothers School and the Irish Academy, where he studied music. Ryan plunged early into the tradition of Irish story-telling and free-lance playing in Dublin salon orchestras.

Honors Won By Marin Musicians

A number of young Marin musicians were among the winners Saturday at the fifth annual Redwood Empire Stage Band Festival at Sonoma State College.

Terra Linda High School's jazz ensemble was selected division winner in the AAAA division, for schools with more than 1,850 students. The group is directed by Charley Gray.

Bob Elkjer of Terra Linda High, whose Bob Elkjer trio performed at the festival, was chosen the best student arranger-composer.

The San Rafael High School stage band, directed by Charlene Wilkerson, was chosen the best lab band. Lab bands, according to a college spokesman, are the second-string school bands which serve as training grounds for students aspiring for positions in other ensembles.

New Floods Expected In Texas

BASTROP, Tex. (UPI) — Flood waters that already killed at least 11 persons in Central Texas moved downstream today and forced the evacuation of some families.

The Department of Public Safety said six bodies were recovered from Dry Creek in Travis County and authorities planned to resume searching today for the body of a child, missing and presumed drowned.

The Colorado River, swollen by driving rainstorms Saturday and Sunday, was expected to crest here at 31 feet, six feet above flood stage.

"We've had to help a couple of people evacuate," a county sheriff's spokesman said. "the water is supposed to continue to rise another foot and it might flood some homes, especially in the low areas." More than eight inches of rain were recorded in less than three hours Saturday night and early Sunday in parts of Travis County. Austin police said a father and his two children were killed when their car was washed off a city street by a rampaging creek. They were identified as Joe Rivas, 28, Joe Jr., 5, and Cynthia, 8.

A spokesman for the state department of public safety said the bodies of two women were recovered from a flooded creek near Kyle in Hays County.

Authorities said seven persons were injured.

Four were hospitalized for exposure after being trapped in their cars by flood waters Saturday night about 15 miles south of Austin.

Anti-Semitic Remarks Looked Into

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Armed Services Committee is looking into recent remarks by Gen. George S. Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, on the "Jewish lobby" in the United States.

The committee holds a closed meeting on the subject today. It will also consider the appointment of Gen. Alexander M. Haig, former President Richard Nixon's White House chief of staff, to head North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces.

Haig's appointment has been criticized because of his closeness to Nixon and because he was jumped over officers with more military, though not political, experience. The committee, however, has no authority over the Haig appointment.

Congressional sources said Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., who has called for Brown's resignation, will demand that the committee hold public hearings on the issue and call Brown to testify.

'The Medium' Is Notch Above The Usual, Deserves Audience

The Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts production of Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera, "The Medium" is not an evening of easy theater.

Even at its most melodic moments, the music is bittersweet, disquieting, strident but hard-hitting. The haunted desperation is chilling and not easily forgotten.

Certainly not entertainment nor cathartic drama, "The Medium" is more an experience in blood-letting. It leaves one wan and weak.

The strong characterizations of Marcos Estebez (Toby) and Elaine Messer (Monica), the satisfactory support of the remaining cast and the dramatic musicianship of Conductor Kurt Giambastiani raised this community theater offering a notch above the usual.

Madame Flora (Jan Luergan) is a medium. A fake swindling her clients, she starts believing in the illusion that she creates, believing that during one of her seances someone has touched her. Soon she starts to fear reality.

Even when she tells her clients that they have been cheated, they go on believing that they've heard the voices and seen the figures of their loved ones.

Menotti's music changes tempo radically, moving from inventive dance-like rhythms to tender interludes and mystic suggestions.

The orchestra under Giambastiani progressed deeply into the changeable score. Moving far past sight reading, it provided much of the evening's dramatic movement.

Juxtaposing novel sounds, Menotti explores a new world of flat and sharp tonalities. As is becoming more and more common in modern opera, much of the music is written in the high, high registers.

Ironically, the production's strongest performer is a mute, the servant Toby.

Estebez is a natural talent, shifting among a variety of moods. Incredulous, then half-witted, vacant, then beguiling, he looks like a young Brando. All that he achieves is done without a word. He plays Toby with a total immersion that is effortless.

Messer sings Monica, Mme. Flora's daughter, in a pointed voice. Occasionally it goes sharp but she has the best command in the cast of the difficult pitch. The vocal lines are almost painfully high.

When she begs her mother for Toby to stay, she grabs at her mother's earrings in a gesture so desperate that it will be hard to forget.

Luergan played Mme. Flora with urgency, but her sparse voice is not well suited for this role. Forced, it showed less control than the others. Yet, as the director and power behind the Mill Valley Center, she deserves much credit.

Her acting lacks dramatic belief, that way of giving stage movement the illusion of real-life impulse. When she took out the rosary beads, for example, the potential for a very subtle moment was missed. She was merely going through stage blocking.

Laughing one moment, crying the next, revengeful, then pious, she is best at Mme. Flora's slip into insanity.

The rest of the cast was supportive. Susan Maraccini was quite good at showing Mrs. Nolan's apprehension and timidity at her first seance.

"The Medium" deserves a larger audience than the approximately 40 people who came Saturday. It will be repeated on Nov. 30, Dec. 5, 12, 14, 19, 20 at 8:30 at the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts, The Golf Club House, 267 Buena Vista Avenue. — B.A.S.

Tax Raise On Agenda

The San Rafael Board of Education will consider calling a tax increase election to ease the school system's financial squeeze when it meets at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in the administration building.

Supt. Donald Leisey said today he will recommend the board call an election to raise $1.6 million, requiring an elementary district tax increase of 11 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, and a high school district tax increase of 42 cents per $100.

Leisey noted that the school system's financial task force has recommended the board call an election to raise the per-pupil spending lid set by SB 90.

"Our income is not meeting the inflationary increases of our economy," Leisey said, adding the situation "is not unique to San Rafael."

A GREAT DAY FOR EVERYONE

Safe Pesticide Handling Will Be Taught In Marin

The Marin County farm adviser and department of agriculture will conduct a training program Wednesday on the safe handling of agricultural pesticides.

The session, cosponsored by the state department of agriculture, will run from 9 a.m. to noon at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building at Civic Center.

County agricultural commissioner R. Allan Ballard said the meeting is expected to draw between 60 and 100 persons and is open to the public.

Employers whose employees handle or apply pesticides for agricultural use are required to provide instruction, training and supervision on handling of the chemicals, he said.

The requirement does not apply to structural or residential pest control operators but does apply to nurseries, schools, cemeteries, golf courses and commercial ranchers and farmers among others.

Additional information may be obtained from the county department of agriculture.

No Session

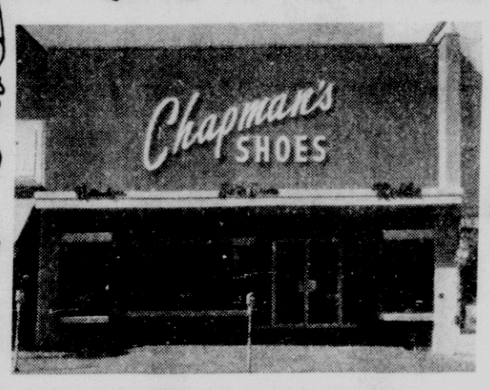

The Corte Madera Sanitary Commission will not hold its regular meeting tomorrow night because it has no business to transact, according to Secretary Lillian Moller.

Burglary Arrest In San Rafael

A 32-year-old Kentfield man was arrested on suspicion of burglary yesterday after San Rafael police found him inside Merrill's Drugs on Fourth Street at 12:42 a.m.

James White Crowther was booked into Marin County Jail and held in lieu of $5,000 bail to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Police said they arrived at the firm to find a front door pried open. Crowther told officers he was in the building because he wanted to go to the bathroom.

We are THANKFUL to the great number of customers who have expressed their gratitude for unusual services performed by our talented employees. Our files contain many testimonies such as "and it is refreshing to do business with Chapman's because you are truly interested in your customers" or "over the years we have been treated as treasured customers by our firm." We do treasure our customers and we are EXTREMELY proud of these expressions.

We are THANKFUL to the large number of manufacturers of nationally known shoe brands who have supplied us with quality products for the past 22 years. Brands we have been proud to offer to our friends in Marin. Redistricting Plan Doesn't Solve Problem

Marin County Supervisor Gary T. Giacomini has come up with a plan to solve the problem that was created by supervisorial redistricting 10 years ago.

The only trouble with Giacomini's plan is that it doesn't solve the problem.

A DECADE AGO, the supervisors were under State Supreme Court order to redistrict to provide more nearly "one man, one vote" representation. The court order resulted from a suit brought by the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce, after supervisorial redistricting following the 1960 census left the rural Fourth District with about 6 per cent of the population.

Byron W. Leydecker, then chairman of the board, drew up a plan which would meet the "one man, one vote" requirement. But to do it, the plan ran a narrow corridor from the Fourth District behind Kent Woodlands, through Larkspur and Corte Madera, and onto the San Quentin Peninsula and the eastern portion of San Rafael.

Hardly anybody liked the plan, except the supervisors.

THOMAS T. STORER, who had just been elected Fourth District supervisor, complained bitterly about it. He pointed out that it put the majority population of his district 25 miles from his home in Point Reyes Station.

City councils of San Rafael, Larkspur and Corte Madera went on record against it. Mayors John F. McInnis of San Rafael, Neil R. Brixon of Larkspur, and Edward W. Colthurst of Corte Madera appeared before the supervisors to protest. There were protests from various organizations, also.

The supervisors adopted the plan anyhow. But the protests were so insistent that they scheduled reconsideration for a special meeting on Feb. 15, 1965.

At that meeting, Winifred C. Frederick, representing the San Geronimo Valley Association, presented a map which retained community of interest for each supervisorial district, eliminated bifurcating the three cities, and nearly met the "one man, one vote" requirement. But the supervisors didn't consider Mrs. Frederick's map. What they did was add a little more territory to the Fourth District.

THAT'S WHAT Giacomini's plan would do, too. It would add territory from the Second, Third and Fifth districts to the existing gerrymandered Fourth District. In so doing it would take away 2,050 residents (by county planning department estimate) from the Third District, 1,320 from the Fifth, and 470 from the Second, and put them in Giacomini's district — which would then be the biggest in the county in population as well as territory.

It would leave San Rafael, Larkspur and Corte Madera bifurcated.

It would leave the corridor connecting San Rafael and the San Quentin Peninsula through Corte Madera and Larkspur with the rest of the Fourth District — a corridor which makes the district appear more like a long-necked clam than anything else in nature.

It would not provide community of interest.

In short, it would do nothing to correct the faults with the existing districting plan. It would merely move some land and people into Giacomini's district.

Try again, Gary.

Democratic Governors Score One Birdie And One Bogey

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The opening day of the recent Democratic Governors Conference at Hilton Head, S.C., John West, the host governor, announced that he arranged a special treat for his colleagues. Golf professional Bob Toski, West reported, was prepared to give every governor a quick lesson that "I guarantee will cut five strokes off your game in 30 minutes."

"And that," one of the reporters covering the conference suggested to his colleagues, "will be the principal accomplishment of this conference."

AS IT HAPPENED, the reporter was wrong. The 30-plus Democratic governors, to the amazement of everyone, including national party chairman Robert S. Strauss, stepped without hesitation into the middle of a dispute that has been bedevilling their party for months and came up with a solution that could keep its Kansas City "miniconvention" from blowing up in bitter controversy next month.

Following the lead of Gov. John J. Gilligan of Ohio, the only one of their number to lose his seat in the Nov. 5 elections, the governors unanimously approved a policy position on the heated dispute over an "affirmative action" provision for the Democratic Party charter to be adopted at Kansas City.

Their action was impressive for its swiftness and for its simplicity. They said the charter — a permanent constitution for the party — should use the same language to guarantee full participation by women, blacks and other special groups as has already been approved for selection of delegates to the 1976 Democratic National Convention.

Strauss, though surprised by Gilligan's move, quickly embraced it, and South Carolina State Chairman Don Fowler, also a member of the charter commission, predicted other state party chiefs would go along.

BUT IF THE GOVERNORS beat par on their internal party squabble, they shanked the ball into the deep rough when it came to dealing with national domestic problems.

In perfectly proper style, the conference chairman, Gov. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, commissioned three governors to prepare a resolution on the economy, the energy shortage and food problems. They came up with a bristling document, calling for everything from the immediate imposition of price, wage and profit controls to the firing of Agriculture Secy. Earl Butz.

Again, keeping his powder dry, Anderson checked out the resolution with the members of the conference in private, and got what he called "substantial agreement" on its contents.

But he neglected to make sure the governors who were for it also planned to stick around to vote on it. As a result, more than half of the group was gone when the resolution came up for debate and Anderson was forced — on a 7-6 vote — to accept a watering down of the wage-price-profit control section that made the governors sound like they were afraid to take a firm stand.

The resolution as passed still had some strong proposals, but the back-down on controls diluted its impact.

SOME PRESENT BLAMED the episode on Anderson. But it was also true that practically every governor had been telling anyone who would listen for three days at Hilton Head that leadership was the nation's most vital need now.

Among those making such ringing pronouncements were a number of governors who demonstrated that quality by leading the way to the airport before the conference had finished its work.

ROSCOE DRUMMOND:

Ford Had To Announce He'll Be Candidate

WASHINGTON — It was this month's huge Democratic victory which caused President Ford to announce unequivocally that he would run in 1976.

Mr. Ford has taken three different positions on his candidacy. When he became vice president he said he had no intention of seeking the presidential nomination. When he became president he said he would "probably" be a candidate. Last week he removed the "probably."

HE HAD GOOD REASON to do so; he had no practical alternative. With his own party enfeebled by losses at every level of government, and with the Democrats in decisive control of both houses of Congress, Mr. Ford could not possibly function effectively as a lame-duck president.

He had to make it clear to the country and to his party that he intended to be an on-going leader, not an out-going leader. Had he left his future intentions in doubt, his influence would decline month by month until his voice was reduced to a whisper.

Most Republicans are delighted that Mr. Ford has removed all doubt about his '76 candidacy. They are not sure they can win with him, but they know they will lose without him. The Republicans, in their present plight, simply could not afford to repudiate a president eligible for re-election — or allow him to repudiate himself.

If the state of the economy and the state of the nation's morale do not improve in the next two years, no Republican is likely to win the presidency. If by luck or leadership, or both, the level of inflation drops and the level of employment rises, Mr. Ford will have a very good prospect of re-election.

WHAT IS OFTEN overlooked in appraising GOP prospects is that, while the Democratic Party has dominated the congressional voting since 1932, the Republican Party has dominated presidential voting since the end of World War II.

Since the earliest years of Franklin Roosevelt, the Democrats have won 20 of the last 22 congressional elections.

But the Republicans have won four of the last seven presidential elections, and only one Democratic nominee for president (Lyndon Johnson in 1964) has during this period won a majority of the popular vote.

Here is another revealing statistical fact — and a very meaningful one. From Harry Truman's election in 1948 through Richard Nixon's re-election in 1972, a total of 553,552,000 votes have been cast for the two major-party presidential nominees. Of this figure, 12,998,000 more votes were cast for the Republican presidential nominees than for the Democratic presidential nominees.

This means that, while the American voters have become a one-party electorate in choosing Congress, they remain a two-party electorate in choosing presidents — with the Republicans having a considerable edge in recent years.

ERNEST B. FURGURSON:

Letter From Girl Friday To Her President

WASHINGTON — (From the desk of the special senior executive Girl Friday to the president.)

Dear Mr. President:

During your trip, several things happened that you might like to be filled in on. Of course you had your regular briefings aboard Air Force One about the right pronunciation of the Boy Scout motto in Japanese and how to wear that cute hat Dobrynin gave you at a more dignified angle and all those diplomatic matters, but I mean things the protocol office might have overlooked.

YOU PROBABLY READ in the papers over there about the hostage action at the Philippine Embassy right up the street. You would have been proud of the police, the way they handled the whole affair with only a detour in the rush-hour traffic up Mass Avenue.

That was about the most exciting thing we had while you were gone, but a lot of people seemed to be upset for some reason about these boring statistics we keep getting from New York, Detroit, and offices around town here.

For example, the day you were being decorated by the scouts in Tokyo, Chrysler announced it was closing down five of its automobile plants because nobody wants to pay the prices the companies are asking for new cars. That makes 150,000 automobile workers laid off lately, which is only about a quarter of the industry's whole labor force, so I don't understand what all the fuss is.

Apparently there is some trouble with the coal miners, too. They have this strike going on; I think it started before you left, as a matter of fact. There is some talk that the strike will go on maybe four weeks, which would mean it fortunately would still be on when you get back, so I guess I don't have to go into that in too much detail. That can't be too important anyway, because four weeks off is just the time most people get for vacation, except maybe the coal miners.

Another piece of paper came in that says the coal strike might have something to do with the automobile layoffs, but I don't see how, because cars run on gasoline.

MR. MORTON SAYS John Sawhill has been talking out of school again. This time he told the Joint Economic Committee that an independent energy survey the FEA (Federal Energy Administration) is getting together actually is loaded with figures straight from the American Petroleum Institute. Where else?

I almost forgot to mention the Greyhound strike, which closes all those bus lines down right here with Thanksgiving coming up, so I guess everybody will just have to fly instead.

Oh, speaking of coal and Mr. Morton and all, there was something about a strip mining bill they were going to pass up at the Hill, or either they weren't going to pass, I forget which. Anyhow, Mr. Morton's people sent them a note saying that if the bill does not include nine changes that they want to keep it from being too tough on the mine operators, you are liable to veto it. Then you could just dare those Democrats to do something about that.

THE DEMOCRATS, by the way, have been having a meeting of their governors down in South Carolina, and the resolutions they passed just proved that all this complaining about the economy is just a partisan political gimmick. They said you ought to close some tax loopholes for upper-income people and tax excess oil profits and do things like that, which I know Mr. Nixon wouldn't have liked.

So it's nothing for you to worry about, really, and I know that when you get back you'll only have a few days before you start packing to go out to Vail for the holidays. But I thought maybe you would like us to get some press releases ready, or order another gross of WIN buttons before you go skiing.

Faithfully . . .

SACRAMENTO SCENE

Retired State Employees Hoping For New Deal

By EARL G. WATERS

Except for those out of work, no segment of the population is more aware of inflation than those retired on fixed incomes. Because of this, the California State Employees Association has given top priority in its legislative program next year to the need for adjustments in the state pension plan.

Under the present system, state workers retire usually at 50 per cent or less of their salaries. When cost-of-living rises started becoming significant, it was decided to grant a one per cent annual adjustment in those pensions. This has since been raised to two per cent. But, after retirement, an employee must wait for two years before becoming eligible for the raise.

THE BASIC BARGAIN implied in state employment is that, after a period of faithful service, an employee will be guaranteed security in the declining years.

But a skyrocketing economy has changed all that. Raises for employees on the job have been frequent. This has meant that the employee retiring at half pay is not getting half of that jobes salary after he has been off the job a year or so. And the gap grows wider each year thereafter.

Many retired state employees are being reduced to an economic level below those welfare by reason of inflation. The average retirement pay for state workers is less than $250 a month.

In the meantime, the retirement fund to which he contributed is rising, right along with everything else. The Public Employees Retirement System has grown to over $6 billion and increases almost a billion dollars a year. In most financial ventures, those who invest share in the earnings. So it would seem fair that the retired employees share in the stock, bond and other security earnings from the investments made possible by their contributions.

IT IS WITH THIS in mind that CSEA is proposing sweeping changes in the plan. Federal employees retirement has already provided for inflation. Whenever the cost of living rises more than 2 per cent, an adjustment is made in the amount of the actual consumer index increase.

Even with the state's 2 per cent adjustment, the employee must wait from year to year. And, this past year when cost increases by anyone's measurement have been at least 10 per cent, the retiree has been left hopelessly behind.

CSEA will propose adjustments be made according to the actual price index increases. And because this has not been the case in the past, they are seeking a onetime adjustment to restore retiree pensions to a parity, in accordance with the price index, with the value of their pension dollar at the time of retirement.

CSEA has been proposing relief for the pensioned in the past several sessions without success. With a new governor taking office in January, the employee group is optimistic for its program. Further, Speaker Leo McCarthy, D-San Francisco, has expressed great concern over the plight of the retired and has stated he will fully support a program of remedies.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY: Letters To The I-J

Words Important When In Constitution

There are probably many people, such as this writer, who were not aware that the pronoun "he" applies to both sexes. While such enlightening information does not always deserve a response this one does because it emphasizes what it seeks to discredit. The power of the written word.

The writer of the letter criticizing proposition 11 (I-J, Nov. 20) states that only a few people ever read the state constitution. If this is true then why were we required to study and pass a test on this same constitution before being graduated from the eighth grade. Also, why did we have to pass a test on the U.S. constitution before graduating from high school. What about the study requirements to become a U.S. citizen. When and if people ever stop reading and believing in those "words" we will really be a country in trouble . . .

The gain is inestimable for our children of the future, not to mention the long term impact of the written word on attorneys, judges, legislators and other individuals who do read the state constitution. Our responsible women leaders have accepted the responsibility to do everything within their powers to contribute to the creation of a society in which people are truly equal. A society in which the development of an individual's potential and talent is not predetermined by race or by gender . . .

Endless Subsidy In Mass Transit Bill

Much rejoicing by Mayor Alioto on Congress passing the $11.8 billion mass transit subsidy.

Are we voters really so ignorant that we don't recognize this sell-out? It is bad enough for the taxpayers of Pierre, South Dakota, to have to pay for new subway cars or track improvements for New York, or new equipment for San Francisco's Muni; but this bill even subsidizes current operating expense. There is no end to current operating expense, so next year we will get another subsidy bill. Is this the way to stop inflation, spending money we don't have — money we have to print out of thin air — for expenses that have no termination?

No matter what the money is for, do we Marin taxpayers want to pay taxes to subsidize New York — or even San Francisco -- transit systems so the local residents will not have to pay higher fares?

I, for one, do not.

CAPITOL QUIPS

By PHIL DESSAUER

It's wholesome for an American president to visit a country like Japan. The crowds make him feel so popular at home.

In recent elections many Democrats rolled in on a tidal wave. But for Wilbur Mills it was a tidal basin.

It doesn't seem fair. Stripper Fanne Fox is preforming in Boston for five times what she used to make, while Congressman Mills is back in the House at the same old pay.

Campaign spending reports filed with the California secretary of state's office showed that Gov. Goodwin J. Knight spent $427,989 in winning a full term as the state's chief executive, while his Democratic opponent, Richard P. Graves, spent $94,851.

Police had to break up a brawl between two labor unions — the Riggers and Millwrights — in a jurisdictional dispute at McLouth Steel Corp. in Detroit. Six of the battlers were hospitalized.

WILL ROGERS SAYS . . .

"You know, as all these late precincts keep coming in (where they can't count very fast) the Democratic lead keeps piling up.

"It's just kinder kicking a fellow when he is down. But in the heat of the moment they have kicked out some awful good Republicans. Too big a victory ain't so good. We need quite a few in there just as detectives, or watchdogs." — Nov. 8, 1934

District Attorney Falls Into Trap At Hearing On Clerk's Complaint

The adage that an attorney who represents himself has a fool for a client was clearly demonstrated last week before the Marin County Personnel Commission.

The attorney-client in this case was Dist. Atty. Bruce Bales, who was so badly outmaneuvered by opposing attorney Richard Breiner that one could almost feel embarrassed for him.

THE CASE INVOLVED a file clerk's complaint that Bales had improperly withheld her $27-per-month salary increase. Bales said he had done so because she worked too slowly.

Breiner, representing the file clerk, was aware going into the hearing of the commission's growing disenchantment with department heads who disregard established personnel procedures.

He knew he could easily establish that his client had not received proper training or job performance evaluations. That, coupled with the commission's mood, virtually assured him of a win.

To assure it absolutely, he launched a diversion — a charge that Bales had withheld the salary increase because his client had refused to participate in his re-election campaign, among other things.

Bales fell into the trap. He and his assistant, Joshua Thomas, were so busy defending against the charge of political misconduct that the real charge administrative bungling went virtually unanswered.

The charge of political misconduct was real and may have had some merit, but it was beyond the scope of the personnel commission, which, correctly, set it aside as irrelevant.

The commission's decision to uphold the file clerk was based on Breiner's arguments that Bales had failed to properly train and evaluate her before denying the salary increase.

Briener acknowledged his strategy after the meeting.

ANOTHER INTERESTING aspect of the case was the role played by Asst. County Administrator Thomas F. Campanella.

Campanella must review and rule on such personnel complaints before they can be appealed to the commission.

He could have made the same finding as the commission, but he chose instead to back Bales.

It has been suggested by some that Campanella backed Bales knowing that it would force the file clerk to appeal her case to the commission, where it would receive a full public hearing.

That is what's known as a Civic Center stiletto.

ELSEWHERE AROUND Civic Center there is speculation that County Counsel Douglas Maloney will leave for Sacramento after the first of the year to accept a position in the Brown administration.

Maloney is sidestepping questions on the matter. If he does leave, it will open the promotion door for Asst. County Counsel Richard Godino, who reportedly has eliminated his name from consideration for appointment to Michael Wornum's seat on the board of supervisors.

THE LIGHTER SIDE

The Future Is Yesterday For Phone Innovations

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sometime within the next decade, assuming justice continues to move with deliberate speed, we should know the outcome of the government's anti-trust suit against American Telephone & Telegraph.

The charge, as I understand it, is that Am. Tel. & Tel., as it is known on Wall Street, has gotten a monopoly on busy signals.

Theoretically, if the government wins the case, it will foster more competition in telecommunications.

I'M NOT SURE what the Justice Department's concept of competition is, but carried to the ultimate it would mean anyone could walk in off the street and start his own telephone company.

And that, again theoretically, would stimulate research on ways to improve phone service.

Already, several new companies are being formed with a view to developing gimmicks to compete with Am. Tel. & Tel. Among them is Nostalgic Ringie-Dingies, Inc. the guiding genius behind No Rin-Din is Sam Harkenback, executive director of the Future Is Yesterday foundation, a privately endowed "think tank" and research center. "This is our big chance to cash in on some of the breakthroughs we have been making in telecommunications," Harkenback told me during a recent visit to the lab. He directed my attention to a wooden box upon which was mounted two metal ringie-dingies, a small crank, a mouthpiece and an earpiece. "Turn that little crank, pick up the receiver and hold it to your ear," he invited.

I did as instructed, and to my utter amazement I heard a nasal female voice intone, "Number, pleeze?"

Bewildered, I turned to Harkenback and exclaimed, "How in the world does it work?"

"We've got a girl with earphones sitting before a switchboard," he explained proudly. "If you speak into that mouthpiece and tell her what number you are calling, she will connect you with your party."

I SAID, "This is fantastic! What do you call the girl who operates the switchboard? 'Operator?'"

"We're thinking of calling her 'Central,'" Harkenback confided.

I said, "Whatever you call her, it sure beats punching little buttons or poking your finger into dial holes. Is anything else in the works?"

"We haven't perfected this yet," Harkenback replied. "But eventually we hope to make it possible for other people to listen in on your conversations. It will be known as a 'party line.'"

A few more innovations like that could put AM. Tel. & Tel. right out of business.

Not All U.S. Presidents Became 'Workaholics'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Not all U.S. Presidents were "workaholics", according to a new review of Washington's work habits. John Adams, for example, liked to skinny-dip in the Potomac.

"Workaholism is Washington's most widespread, socially acceptable, financially rewarding and patriotic disease," says author Phyllie Theroux in the December issue of The Washingtonian magazine. "Big success is predicated upon it."

The article described "workaholism" as consuming dedication to work at the expense of family life, and says Presidents such as Richard M. Nixon have traditionally seemed the most dedicated workaholics of all.

But the article asserts this hard-working Presidential image probably dates only from the days of Grover Cleveland, who started the practice of working past midnight.

George Washington, it says, spent time hunting for a dining room mirror he fancied. Thomas Jefferson did some of his own grocery shopping. Ulysses S. Grant headed for the riding stables at 3:30 p.m. and Abraham Lincoln found Washington full of loafers.

And Adams? "John Adams, it says, "was fond of stargazing through a telescope on the White House roof and he regularly skinny-dipped in the Potomac when the weather was warm."

Adams stopped that for good, the article says, "when a brassy woman reported sat on his clothes while she conducted an interview."

In 1972, when last checked, American war veterans included 2,538 who fought in the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection or the Boxer Rebellion.

Abortion Is Murder, Not Justifiable, Pope Claims

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI said today abortion is murder and cannot be justified by poverty, illegitimacy or the world population problem.

"We proclaim that none of these reasons can ever objectively confer the right to dispose of another's life, even when that life is only at the beginning," the Pope said in a document released on the eve of a French parliamentary debate on a free abortion bill.

He said Christians should try to remove the root causes of abortion by caring for unwed mothers, the poor and the handicapped.

The document was prepared by the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, the Vatican watchdog body over faith and morals, and issued at the Pope's express instructions.

The 3,500-word declaration cited God's commandment: "You shall not kill" and said the problem of overpopulation can be solved through sexual abstinence or the rhythm system, but never through abortion.

Rejecting the view that abortion is justified in the early stages of pregnancy, the statement said, "any discrimination based on the various stages of life is no more justified than any other discrimination. From the time the ovum is fertilized, a life is begun that is neither that of the father nor of the mother."

Rome Transport Workers Strike

ROME (UPI) — Rome bus and streetcar workers staged a six-hour strike today, ushering in a wave of labor trouble for Premier Aldo Moro's new government.

The transportation workers walked off their jobs at 9 a.m. to protest the city's failure to pay them $670 each in arrears. The city administration, which is $484 million in the red, said it couldn't get the needed bank loans.

The strike caused only minor inconvenience because most Romans arrived at work before it began.

Leander W. Duhring Seeks Post

(One of a series of stories on applicants for a vacancy on the Fairfax Planning Commission.)

Leander W. Duhring has applied for appointment to a Fairfax Planning Commission post vacant since the death of John Grybel.

Duhring, 23, is among six candidates for the post. The town council will fill the vacancy at 8 p.m. Dec. 9. No deadline for applications has been set.

Duhring, a one-year resident of the town, said he is seeking appointment to the commission because he is "concerned about the future of Fairfax . . . I don't want it to become like San Jose."

He said he is an open space advocate and backs strict growth controls. He wants the town to permit construction of "as few units annually as is legally possible."

Major issue in Fairfax is conservation, Duhring said, adding that regional agencies should not be allowed to preempt local control. "All decisions should be made on the local level."

He said the city sign ordinance is a good measure and should be enforced.

He said Max Friedman's Town and Country Club parcel should be preserved as a local recreational area. He thinks the Buon Gusto restaurant parcel might make a good site for a regional library.

Duhring is a native of Detroit who was raised in Redwood City.

He works as a freelance furniture repairman with accounts in Marin and San Francisco.

He lives at 34 Olema Drive.

Energy Buried In Gas Pockets

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — A Penn State mining engineer says there is enough methane gas buried in pockets under Pennsylvania to heat the state and most of New England indefinitely.

Dr. Robert Stefanko says 300 million cubic feet of the gas escapes into the atmosphere daily.

"In the interest of improved efficiency alone," he says, "we would do well to consider the tapping off of methane."

Today is Monday, Nov. 25, the 325th day of 1974 with 36 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

Pope John XXIII was born Nov. 25, 1881.

On this day in history:

In 1783, more than 6,000 British troops evacuated New York City after signing the peace treaty ending the Revolutionary War.

In 1920, radio station WTAW in College Station, Tex., broadcast the first play-by-play description of a football game . . . between the University of Texas and Texas A&M.

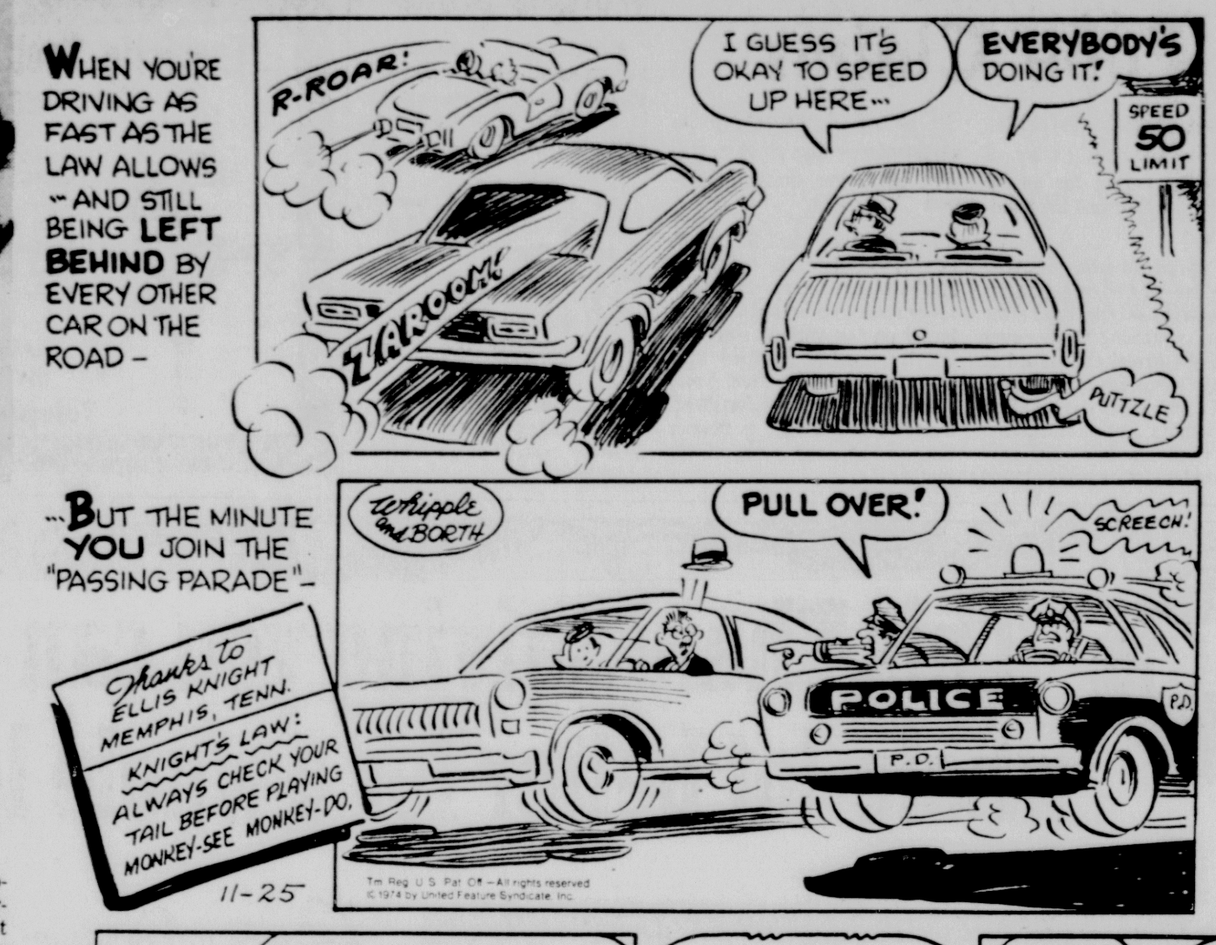

In 1944, the American War Refugee Board charged Germany with mass murder during World War II.

In 1963, President John F. Kennedy, assassinated three days earlier, was buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

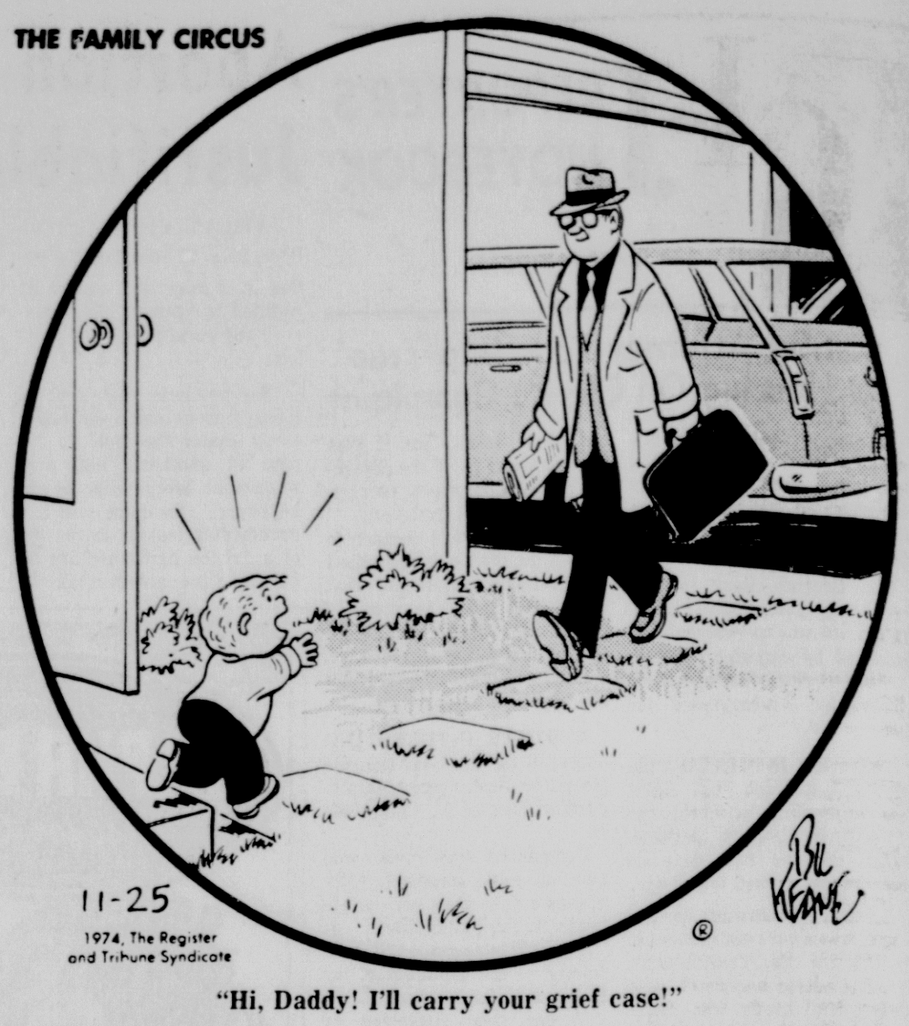

A thought for the day: American poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow said, "Into each life some rain must fall; some days must be dark and dreary."

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE
By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Old Mark Twain Saying Is A Jingle For Bridge Player

Mark Twain once wrote about a catchy jingle that began "Punch, brothers, punch with care." Bridge players must exercise the same care by proper attention to the ace of trumps.

FORCE RUFF

West leads his three top hearts, forcing South to ruff. Bridge players call this "punching" declarer.

After ruffing the third round of hearts, South leads the king of spades. Should West take the trick?

MUST HOLD UP

If West takes the ace of trumps early, he will be unable to continue the attack on South's trump suit. A heart continuation would allow dummy to ruff, and South would be able to keep all of his own trumps to draw those held by West.

If South is allowed to win the first trump trick, he continues by leading the queen of trumps. West must again refuse the trick for exactly the same reason.

Now declarer is helpless. If South leads a third trump, West takes the ace of trumps and leads another heart to punch out South's last trump West will then win tricks with the four of trumps and with the last heart to collect a low-trick penalty.

South can hold it to a one-trick defeat by abandoning trumps after West has twice refused to take the ace. South must run his clubs and let West win two trump tricks.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two diamonds.

This is a good hand but not well suited to a takeout double because you do not have fine support for the unbid suits.

Conspiracy Charged In Book Publishing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department today charged 21 major American publishing houses with violating antitrust laws by conspiring to divide world book markets among themselves since 1947.

Assistant Attorney General Thomas E. Kauper said a civil suit filed in U.S. District Court in New York City charged that the publishers entered into agreements to allocate exclusive marketing territories throughout the world.

Only areas agreed upon by the publishers were "open territory" for book sales, Kauper said.

He said the defendants monitored each other and attempted to suppress any actual or attempted violation of the allocation agreements.

The suit said that as a result of these practices competition among publishers in the United States and Britain has been suppressed, international trade in English-language books has been restrained and bookbuyers have been deprived of the benefits of open competition.

The Justice Department asked for a permanent court injunction to prevent the defendants and "co-conspirators" from conduct that limits competition between American and British publishers.

Most of the publishing firms named as defendants are based in New York City.

The New York City companies named in the suit were Bantam Books, Inc.; Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc.; Dell Publishing Co., Inc.; Grosset & Dunlap, Inc.; Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Inc.; Harper & Row Publishers, Inc.; Litton Educational Publishing, Inc.; MacMillan, Inc.; McGraw Hill, Inc.; Oxford University Press, Inc.; Random House, Inc.; Simon & Schuster, Inc.; The Viking Press, Inc., and John Wiley & Sons, Inc.

Other publishers named as defendants included Addison-Wesley Publishing Co., Reading, Mass.; Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston; Intext, Inc., Scranton, Pa.; Penguin Books, Inc., Baltimore, Md.; Prentice Hall Inc., Englewood Cliffs, N.J., and The Times Mirror Co., Los Angeles.

Named as a co-conspirator but not a defendant was the Publishers Association, a British organization whose membership includes almost all major publishing houses in the United Kingdom.

These member publishing houses themselves also were named as coconspirators but not defendants.

The suit alleged these economic facts about the publishing business in the United States and the United Kingdom:

In the United States book sales, excluding sales by book clubs and mail order publications, totaled more than $2 billion a year. This includes $140 million imported into the United States each year.

The United States exports books valued at an estimated $250 million each year. The United Kingdom forms the largest foreign market for U.S. books.

The United Kingdom exports books valued at $165 million each year and imports more than $65 million worth.

The suit gave this description of how one phase of the allegedly illegal agreement worked:

Whenever a copyrighted book published by a defendant company in the United States was also published in the United Kingdom, the American company would grant a license under the copyright to a United Kingdom publisher.

Usually, the suit said, that license would give the United Kingdom publisher an exclusive right under the British Traditional Market. That market covers some 70 countries, virtually all present and former members of the British Commonwealth, the suit said.

In return, the suit said, the United Kingdom publisher would agree not to publish or sell the book in the United States and certain other countries, usually Canada and the Philippines.

The suit charged this system worked in exactly the same way except in reverse when a United Kingdom publisher brought out a book to be published also in the United States. The U.S. publisher usually would get exclusive rights to handle the book in the United States and, possibly, certain other countries such as the Philippines.

In return, the U.S. publisher would agree to stay out of the British Traditional Market.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Job-Related Skin Rashes Usually From Plant Substance

Job-related skin diseases usually stem from direct contact with an irritant or from an allergy to an industrial substance used in the plant. Detection of the offender may be easy or require a long drawn-out search as almost all dermatoses also can be due to nonoccupational causes.

Industrial dermatoses tend to follow a definite pattern.

Some resemble an acute or chronic eczema; others, a red rash with pimples, still others involve loss of pigment or open ulcers and tumors located on easily exposed areas such as the hands, fingers, wrists or forearms. Rashes due to fumes, vapors or mists favor the face, eyelids, ears and neck.

Although skin tests help to make the diagnosis when allergy is responsible, many patch test kits do not come with the materials used in most industries. A careful study about how the dermatitis started and how it behaved is more helpful.

Common irritants include strong acids and alkalis, certain aromatic amines, hydrazine, phosphorus and alkali metals. Marginal offenders include soaps, detergents, solvents and almost any chemical that dries, defats, or alters the skin's equilibrium with its environment. Whatever the cause, delicate skin simply can't take it and the result is dermatitis.

Applications of a cortisone ointment or lotion, or ice soaks and wet dressings with Aveeno powder or milk and water may be needed. Wearing thick plastic gloves to bed helps to retain moisture in the skin and enhances penetration of the cortisone medication. Soothing agents such as Cetaphil lotion, Nutraderm, Acid Mantle Creme or Lotion, and Keri or Jeri-Lotion are all good.

To eliminate any rash, the cause must be known. Prevention may require special cleansing of the skin. For example, when exposed to water, certain dyes remain trapped in the skin. Alcohol, on the other hand, removes the dye.

INTROVERTS

T. R. writes: Is a person born an introvert or does he acquire the trait?

REPLY

Some people are born this way; others acquire the tendency as a result of unpleasant social contacts.

DOUBLE-BARRELED SNEEZER

C. E. M. writes: One of our co-workers, who goes in for double-barreled sneezes, claims that it is harmful to hold back a sneeze. We would like your thoughts on this.

REPLY

I hope he covers his nose and mouth with a tissue. Violent sneezes have been known to rupture a blood vessel and, in this respect, are not advisable.

WINE WITH SLEEPING PILLS

H. T. writes: Is it harmful to take a small glass of wine with a sleeping pill?

REPLY

The combination of wine and a sleeping tablet is harmful only when the individual has imbibed so much he can't recall taking the first dose and inadvertently takes another and, in some cases, a third dose. This practice is not recommended.

IRRITABLE HEART

W. D. writes: Is an irritable heart a serious condition?

REPLY

Yes, if it is due to poor coronary circulation or is related to another disease process. The answer is no if it stems from too much tea, cofee or heavy smoking since these can be discontinued.

PHOBIAS, DELUSIONS

R. D. writes: What is the difference between a phobia and a delusion?

REPLY

A phobia is a persistent or abnormal fear; a delusion is a false belief that cannot be corrected through reasoning.

KIM HAS COLITIS

A. N. writes: My Kimberly, who is 8 years old, suffers from spastic colon. What caused it and is there any chance that it might lead to cancer?

REPLY

My guess is that tension or too many harsh or fried foods caused it. There is no reason why it should lead to cancer, but if I were you, I would find and eliminate the causes. Drugs such as belladonna or a sedative relieve the spasm, but these drugs must be taken under medical supervision.

CYSTS ON FOREHEAD

N. O. B. writes: Three months ago a wen (half the size of a pea) developed on my forehead. Should I have it removed or will it disappear on its own? By the way, I just celebrated my 75th birthday.

REPLY

Wens may get smaller, but they rarely disappear spontaneously. They are not serious unless they become infected. You are not too old to have it removed if it is unsightly or bothersome.

WHY LIVER ENLARGES

N. Y. writes: What are some of the conditions that cause the liver to enlarge?

REPLY

A variety of conditions can do this. Among these are infections, poisoning, cirrhosis from heavy drinking, congestive heart disease and blood disorders such as leukemia.

Stubborn Fire

RIVERSIDE (UPI) — Inaccessible terrain hampered fire fighters today in their efforts to control a stubborn, 1,600-acre brush fire near Sunnyslope, a small community four miles west of here.

U.S. Carrier Sailing In Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the first time in a quarter century, a U.S. aircraft carrier is sailing the Persian Gulf just off the world's richest oil fields, the Pentagon announced today.

The carrier Constellation sailed into the gulf yesterday for what the Pentagon officially labelled a "routine deployment." Officials said the last U.S. carrier visit to the Persian Gulf was in 1948.

The Constellation was accompanied by two guided missile destroyers, the Berkeley and Cochrane. The carrier and destroyers will remain in the gulf "briefly", the Pentagon said, before rejoining a Central Treaty Organization naval exercise now in progress in the Arabian Sea.

The 75,000-ton carrier, which carries about 80 aircraft and a crew of 5,000, is expected to launch its aircraft in the gulf. But the Pentagon said the planes will not fly over the neighboring oil-producing countries.

All the primary oil fields of the region, located in Iraq, Iran, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Bahrein, Oman and the United Arab Emirates, are adjacent to the gulf and within easy flying distance of the carrier's fighter bombers.

The Pentagon said the carrier would sail up to the area around Bahrein as part of a "familiarization" visit. The United States normally maintains three smaller vessels based at Bahrein.

Chicago 7 Figure Seen Keeping Job

MONTPELIER, Vt. (UPI) — Former Chicago Seven defendant John Froines will be allowed to keep his job as Vermont's director of occupational health and safety, according to published reports.

Gov. Thomas P. Salmon has decided to accept a recommendation from Froines' superiors to grant permanent status when his six-month probationary period expires in January, the Rutland Herald reported Saturday. Salmon could not be reached for comment.

TELEVISION REVIEW

Rhoda's Wedding Was A Big Hit

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Series stars from Inger Stevens in "The Farmer's Daughter" to Fred MacMurray in "My Three Sons" have married on television without causing a great stir.

So why did Rhoda Morgenstern's wedding to Joseph Gerard send the rating through the roof?

"Rhoda" scored five points higher than any show in the Nielsen ratings during the week that Valerie Harper wed her series costar David Groh. The achievement is remarkable in view of the fact that the CBS situation comedy is in its first season.

"The response to the wedding was fantastic," remarks Miss Harper. "I couldn't believe it. People all over the country had wedding receptions, with big wedding cakes and formal dress.

"We got engraved invitations to receptions in Bakersfield and San Diego."

"Instead, Dick (Schaal her husband) and I stayed home and watched the show with a friend of ours, Anthony Zerbe, the actor. It was fun to watch. I thought the show came off very well.

"And now, the wedding presents! I can't believe them. A beautiful silver candy bowl, engraved 'Rhoda and Joe.' Typical wedding gifts like that. And the mail — fantastic."

Her enthusiasm is obvious. It is nice to have a hit in your first starring series.

She is realistic to know that external forces contributed to the huge rating for the "Rhoda" wedding.

"I think I was lucky to come along at a time when something interesting was happening in the country," she remarked.

"I think after Watergate and all the other problems all Americans have been having, people liked the idea of seeing a traditional wedding with the white wedding dress and all that.

"I suspect that a lot of girls were saying, 'Maybe that's now what I will want; maybe I'll just live with the guy. But it's nice to see someone having that kind of wedding anyway."

She added that many viewers have requested a copy of the marriage vows, which included the phrases, "as long as you both shall love," and I now pronounce you married" instead the sexist "man and wife."

"Rhoda" is two-thirds finished with its first season of filming, and its shape is still evolving.

"It's time to build up some friends for me and a couple of continuing characters at Joe's office," Valerie said. "It helps the show to have more characters people can identify."

One of the new characters is Dick Schaal, who is portraying Joe Gerard's best friend — "and Rhoda can't stand him." That will take some acting, but Valerie and Dick Schaal are accustomed to working together.

During their early marriage in New York, they appeared in commercial films, later onstage in "Second City" and "Story Theater," had their own brief series, "The New Yorkers" and have done four "Mary Tyler Moores" together.

Fans are already asking, "When is Rhoda's baby coming?"

Valerie answers: "not right away. This show is about a newly married couple, and it should reflect all the things that happen in that relationship.

"One of the reasons 'Rhoda' has been successful is that it seems real, and we want to keep it that way.

For instance, we'll show that Joe's demolition business is bad, because there is so little construction. That's something everyone can identify with."

Seer's Glimpse Of Reichstag Fire Shook Up German Brass

In Hitler's Third Reich there were a number of self-styled seers and mystics who rose to prominence — though all had a way of falling from grace and meeting mysterious and unhappy ends.

One such seer consulted by Nazi bigwigs like Rudolph Hess and Heinrich Himmler, and even Hitler himself, was a strange man who called himself Erik Hanussen.

His real name was Hermann Steinschneider and he was Austrian by birth. He made a name in Germany in the 1920s by his spectacular stage shows in which he located hidden objects in the audience, apparently read people's minds and performed other mentalist wonders.

Hanussen, like all mentalists, was originally a magician and had actually written a textbook of conjuring in his early days. But as his reputation grew so did the belief that he was more than merely a clever trickster, that he really could read minds and foretell events.

Once, in May, 1930, Hanussen was dragged into court on a charge of fortune-telling. He challenged the court to allow him to prove that he was no fake but a genuine psychic.

In the presence of a panel of experts, chosen for their "open-mindedness" toward supernatural phenomena, Hanussen was asked to find a hidden object and answer five questions clairvoyantly. He succeeded — how and by what means we do not know. He won an aquittal by the court which in a 131-page opinion called Hanussen the "possessor of strange powers."

Hanussen won the favor of the Nazis before Hitler came to power by making certain widely publicized predictions that the swastika soon would wave over Germany and then over most of Europe.

Top Nazis regularly attended his fashionable seances in which Hanussen, his guests grouped around him in a circle, would peer intently into an illuminated crystal ball. Hitler attended at least one of these sessions and said later: "Occultism deserves our close attention."

Then Hanussen's most fateful night arrived. It was February 26, 1933. He threw a lavish housewarming party at his palatial new home in Berlin to be topped off by a deluxe seance. Several members of Hitler's immediate entourage were present.

During the seance, the guests sitting in the dark while Hanussen peered into his illumined crystal ball, a momentous question was asked.

"What lies in the immediate future for the Third Reich?" It was posed by Berlin's chief of police.

Staring deeply into his crystal, Hanussen for a long moment seemed lost in concentration. Then his face clouded over, a look of actual pain crossed his features.

The guests leaned forward intently in their chairs. They knew that any moment the prophet would speak, describing the images he saw.

"I see flames," he murmured in a hoarse voice. "Huge flames . . . There is a fire . . . a terrible fire has broken out in Berlin.

"Criminal incendiaries have been at work . . . It is their aim to plunge Germany into chaos at the eleventh hour."

The seance ended in an uproar. The guests demanded to know where and when this fire would break out. The medium pleaded that he could see nothing more, that the images in the crystal had fled. The guests left hurriedly.

The next evening, fire erupted in the Reichstag, the German parliament. The historic building was gutted. Ultimately a Dutch Communist was tried and convicted of arson but many observers believed the Nazis themselves set the fire and blamed it on the Communists to create a situation in which Hitler could seize absolute power.

At any rate, the spectacular seance was Hanussen's greatest — and his last.

The medium's bullet-riddled body was found in a forest near Berlin a few days later. The murder was never solved.

Was Hanussen liquidated by the Nazis because his prophecy had been based on advance knowledge leaked to him by a prominent party member? Was he killed for having been indiscreet?

Or did he truly pull aside the veil of the future and catch a brief terrifying glimpse of what lay ahead?

Only Hanussen knows. And he's in no position to tell.

Chou Recuperating In Peking Hospital

TOKYO (AP) — Chinese Premier Chou En-lai, who reportedly suffered a heart attack last May, is still recuperating in a Peking hospital, China's official Hsinhua news agency says.

Chou was visited yesterday by an economic delegation from he government-in-exile of Cambodia's Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Hsinhua said Sunday. The agency did not mention Chou's condition.

Fearless Forecaster Right On Some, Others Wrong

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Well, gang, I guess it's time to retrieve the Fearless Forecast of September and see how many predictions on the fate of 24 new series offered then hold up now.

Here are the early projections and the final returns:

SUNDAY — The forecast said the Cher-less "Sonny Comedy Revue" with Sonny Bono on ABC was an immediate goner. ABC has agreed.

MONDAY — CBS' "Rhoda" was given a long life and NBC's "Born Free" a short one. Both calls proved right. Honest.

TUESDAY — CBS' "Sons and Daughters" and "Manhunter" got quick-demise declarations. CBS now says the first is leaving, the second staying.

At NBC, "Little House on the Prairie" was called out by spring. Whereupon the series sprang back with a mid-season renewal.

At ABC, "That's My Mama" and "Get Christie Love" were declared certain mid-season ax victims. Wrong and wrong.

THURSDAY — A fair Forecast-day. NBC's "Sierra" was pronounced a mid-season loser and "Movin' On" given a full year. Both calls were right. The Forecast was foiled on "Paper Moon," which ABC is folding at mid-season. We gave it a season and no more. "Harry O," which we gave at least two years, is certain of one.

FRIDAY — CBS' "Planet of the Apes" was given half a season and then no more bananas. CBS agreed.

At ABC, "Kodiak" didn't look bearish and drew warnings of a mid-season ax. The ax fell. "Texas Wheelers" got a "maybe" outlook for a season's run, but ABC said, "No way."

SATURDAY — CBS' "Paul Sand" show, about a young bass fiddle player, got a Forecast nod for just one season. CBS disagreed and removed both player and fiddle in mid-pizzicato.

At ABC, we figured "The New Land" would get the old mid-season chop, which happened. "Nakia" got a possible full season, but the network said that was impossible and dropped the series.

Comedian Gives Tiny Town Help

TAFT, Okla. (AP) — Television star Redd Foxx turned over $10,000 to this tiny eastern Oklahoma community for a start on a swimming pool.

Foxx, star of "Sanford and Son," came to this predominantly black community yesterday. An estimated 500 persons — probably more than the population of Taft — jammed the Taft elementary school auditorium for the ceremony.

It was Foxx's second trip to Taft. Last summer he was named chief of police of Taft.

Asked why he picked Taft to help, he told newsmen, "Taft selected me."

It will include interviews with people who claim to have seen these creatures, film and photographs that are claimed to show proof of their existence, and interviews with scientists who are sifting the evidence for clues that will prove or disprove their reality.

KCRA (3), KRON (4), 9 p.m. — Yul Brynner and George Chakaris star in the movie presentation "Kings of the Sun," an action adventure drama. When the Mayans are attacked from the west, they take refuge with a more primitive tribe but find that their new security is short-lived.

Inflation Spiral Hit The Leech Business, Too

CHICAGO (UPI) — A recently-posted large sign in Sargent's Drug Store informed passerbys "leeches now available here again."

Harvey Snitman, manager of Sargent's, which has been located in Chicago's downtown area since 1852, said "you may be surprised but that sign is good news to a lot of people."

Leeches, the remedy for black eyes in grandfather's day, have been hit by the inflationary spiral like everything else. They also are getting harder to find.

Snitman searched the world leech markets for eight months before succeeding.

"I got this shipment of 100 leeches from a London firm which specializes in hard-to-find items, and I expect it to last about six weeks before I have to reorder," he said.

Four years ago leeches cost $1 each, now they go for $5, he said.

A Chance To Laugh In A Sorry Season

SAN FRANCISCO — Forty-Niner defensive end Cedrick Hardman was in a much better mood as he peeled off his football armor yesterday in the team's dressing room.

The 49ers had just dumped the Atlanta Falcons, 27-0, seven days after they had whipped the Chicago Bears, 34-0. It was the first time the team had back-to-back shutouts since 1961.

HARDMAN HAD not been laughing much this year while the team was stumbling to seven losses in its first nine games. And despite the meanness this 258-pound man shows on the field, he would rather laugh than scowl off the field.

He had a good time yesterday, sacking Falcon starting quarterback Pat Sullivan twice and reserve Kim McQuilken once. The sacking of McQuilken was on the rookie's first play of the game, just after public address announcer Dave Scofield had introduced him to the spectators. Hardman welcomed McQuilken in his own way.

The youngster out of Lehigh University dropped back to pass and when he turned there was Hardman. He grabbed McQuilken in a bear hug and after turning him around once, slammed him to the astroturf like a bag of potatoes.

Were any words exchanged? "I didn't say anything but he was telling me to let him go,' Hardman said. That was right before Cedrick slammed him to the ground. "He was still struggling to get away, you know."

THE 49ERS' defense in the last two games has gone back to the way it was in the team's first two games of the season. While the team's offense went from bad to horrible the defense let down between that time and the result was seven straight losses. Now that coach Dick Nolan has found rookie quarterback Tom Owen and has stuck with him, the team is playing up to its potential.

Although Owen completed only seven of 16 passes yesterday, he still had a fine afternoon. The passes he did complete came just at the right time, two of them touchdowns to wide receiver Gene Washington, five and 53 yards. Owen has an aura of leadership and the team seems to respond to him. He is the kind of guy who seems to get things done. The attitude is catchy and his confidence rubs off on the other players.

Another rookie who had cause for a big grin after the game was Manfred Moore, a running back out of University of Southern California. He was the guy who did so much blocking last year for Anthony Davis.

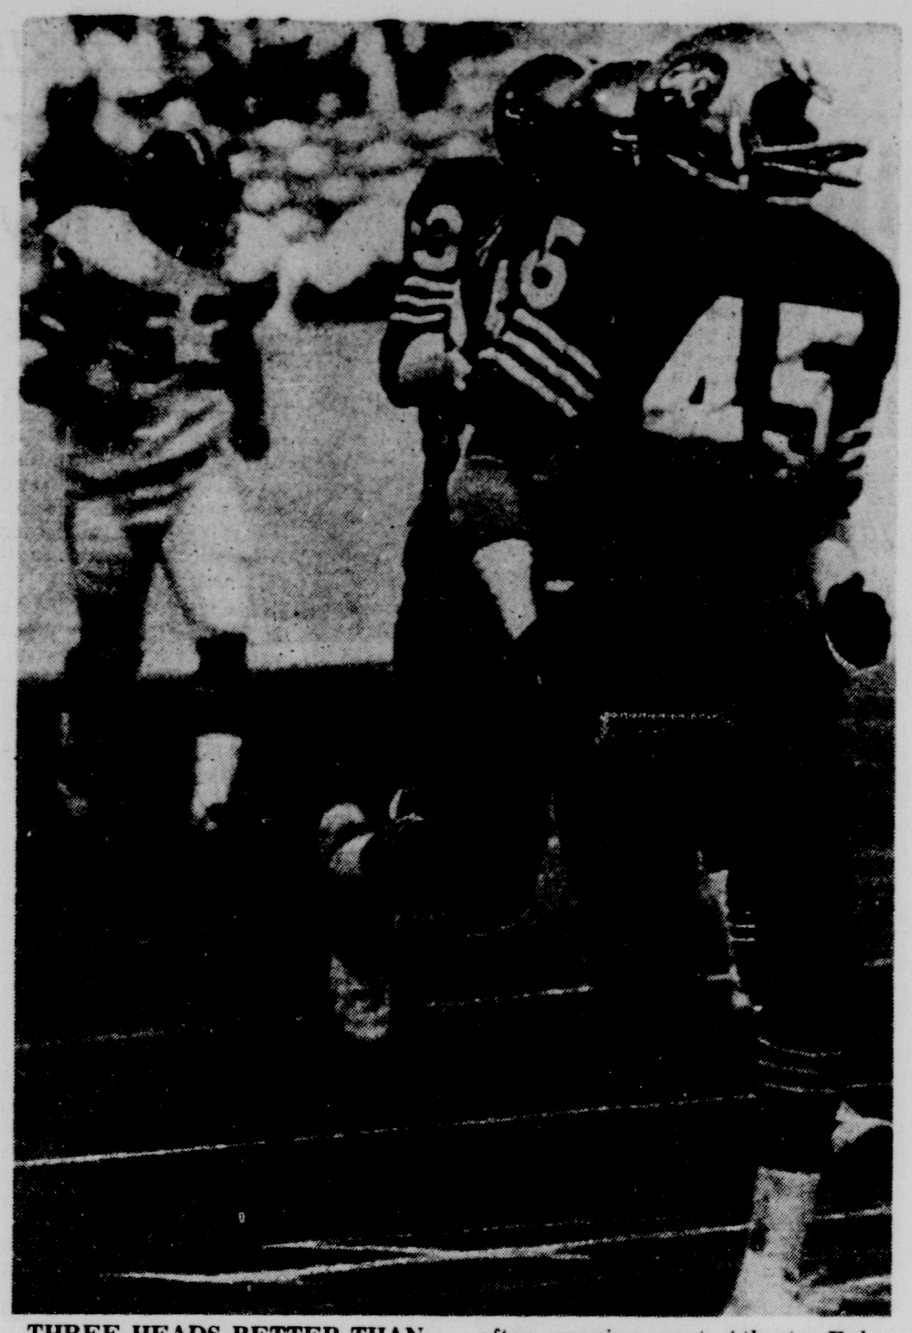

MOORE RETURNED a punt 88 yards for a fourth quarter touchdown, his longest TD run of college and pro football. He also recovered a fumble when Tom Wittum's squib kick bounced off the chest of Atlanta's Ted Fritsch. That was to be the last time the Falcons would have the football.

He said Mike Holmes, another rookie, threw the first block to spring him after he caught the punt. "I realized I had a chance for a touchdown when I saw just one guy witn an angle on me and then (Skip) Vanderbundt threw the block on him." That last defender was Atlanta punter John James.

Moore is going to be the guest speaker at the 49er Goal Rushers of Marin meeting tomorrow night at Holiday Inn in Terra Linda and I know those fans will be happy to hear from the young man. After all, that was the second longest punt return in the team's history, and being second best to Hugh McElhenny (94 yards in 1952) is pretty darn good.

FORTY-NINER fullback Larry Schreiber had his best game of the year, collecting 106 yards in 20 carries. Said Nolan: "Atlanta's defense was keying on (Wilbur) Jackson going wide and it left the inside open for Schreiber."

Of the 51,014 tickets sold for the game, 45,435 were used with 5,579 no shows. If the 49ers have another good game against the Browns in Cleveland next Sunday, those no shows will be back in full force for the final two home games, against Green Bay and New Orleans.

THREE HEADS BETTER THAN ONE — San Francisco 49ers' punt returner Manfred Moore was convoyed by two teammates Bill Belk (center) and John Saunders after running past Atlanta Falcons' defender Paul Ryczek en route to an 88-yard touchdown early in the fourth quarter yesterday at Candlestick Park.

FACED RAIDER RESERVES

Denver's Ralston Realist In Victory

OAKLAND (UPI) — John Ralston is realist enough to know his Denver Broncos' victory over the Oakland Raiders should carry an asterisk.

In this case it was a matter of the Raiders, who already have clinched the American Football League West title and are merely playing out the season in anticipation of the playoffs, using a lot of second line players and seemingly not paying strict attention to the work at hand.

It all added up to a 20-17 victory for the Broncos, who are in the middle of a three-game series within 11 days. They lost to the Kansas City Chiefs last Monday night and in three days play the Detroit Lions in the nationally televised Thanksgiving Day game.

"We caught the Raiders flat," said Ralston of yesterday's victory. "For us, it was a solid team effort but in all fairness the Raiders didn't use their best players at all times. They tried a lot of young people, and who could blame them. They are looking ahead to the playoffs."

Otis Armstrong and Jon Keyworth teamed for 294 yards rushing to highlight the Broncos' fifth victory of the year which evened their record at 5-5-1. Mathematically, they are still alive for a wild card berth to the playoffs but no one in Denver is holding his breath for that possibility.

Armstrong carried the ball 29 times for 146 yards and Keyworth 15 for 148. Included in Keyworth's total was a 30-yard bolt up the mmiddle in the first quarter for Denver's initial touchdown.

"We know the Raiders have good lateral movement on defense, so our plan was to run right at them with Otis and Jon," said Ralston. "It seemed like our only chance to beat them."

The Broncos lost quarterback Charley Johnson to a hip pointer late in the second quarter and it's questionable whether he can play Thursday against the Lions. Steve Ramsey relieved Charley against Oakland and did a creditable job.

Between them Johnson and Ramsey threw the ball only 18 times for 118 yards. One of the completions was an eight-yarder from Ramsey to Jerry Simmons late in the third quarter for what proved the winning score.

The Raiders' running game was pretty well shut off with rookies Harold Hart and Mark Van Eeghen plus backup veterans Pete Banaszak and Charlie Smith alternating carrying the ball. Marv Hubbard didn't get in for a single play (sore back) and Clarence Davis got in for only two.

Ken Stabler threw the ball 34 times, hitting 22 for 234 yards and both Raiders TDs. Fred Biletnikoff scored on a 34-yard grab in the second quarter and a seven-yard catch in the fourth. The two scores gave Stabler 20 for the season.

The loss snapped a nine-game Oakland winning streak and while it didn't seem to bother most of the Raiders, it upset coach John Madden to a point.

"No good ever comes of losing," Madden said. "I've never believed you can learn anything by losing. Sure, we used a lot of different players but that's no excuse."

13th Round Draft Pick Real Nugget

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The 13th round draft pick came through at quarterback while the Heisman Trophy winner couldn't move his team and that was the difference in San Francisco's 27-0 victory over Atlanta yesterday.

Rookie Tom Owen, 13th round pick from Wichita, again kept his cool under fire to lead the Prospectors to their shutout victory. Coming on the heels of a 34-0 whitewash of Chicago, it marked the first time since 1961 the 49ers had recorded back-to-back National Football League shutouts since 1961.

"Owen is improving every week," beamed coach Dick Nolan after the game. Owen has drawn praise for hanging onto the ball until the last possible moment in the face of ferocious rushers like Claude Humphrey of Atlanta and Wally Chambers of Chicago.

"When I'm passing, I have total concentration on the receivers. I don't think about the linemen," says Owen.

He hit Gene Washington with touchdown passes of 5 and 53 yards in the first half yesterday, and then another one of the Prospectors' bumper crop of 1974 rookies, Manfred Moore, iced the game early in the fourth quarter with an 88-yard punt return. Two late Bruce Gossett field goals finished off the Falcons.

Moore's gallop, with Mike Holmes and Skip Vanderbundt contributing key blocks, was the second longest in 49er history. Legendary Hugh McElhenny went 94 yards as a rookie in 1952 against the Bears in Chicago.

While the 49ers piled up the points to run their record to 4-7, Atlanta again came up short at quarterback in losing for the sixth time in a row. Coach Marion Campbell, still looking for his first win since replacing stormy Norm Van Brocklin, went with former Heisman Trophy winner Pat Sullivan from Auburn since Bob Lee has been disappointing all season.

Sullivan faced a tremendous pass rush all day led by Cedrick Hardman and Bob Hoskins and also saw some key tosses dropped. He wound up with 13 completions in 30 tries for only 148 yards with two interceptions. But in the key statistic, Sullivan was able to convert third down plays into a first down only once in 11 tries.

"It was really frustrating. I just don't know what it is. I guess when things start going bad, they just seem to snowball," a discouraged Sullvan said after the one-sided contest.

Campbell said "Pat looked sharp at times, but the whole team seemed to break down."

Campbell had a pointed "no comment" reply when asked why he didn't put in Lee, but indicated he was taking a hard look at number three man Kim McQuilken, who took over in the closing seconds after Sullivan was shaken up and also failed to generate any offense. "I've been working awfully hard to get McQuilken ready," said Campbell. We have seen what Sullivan and Lee can do. I'm just searching for a key to ignite us."

Late in the game, the 49ers put in Steve Spurrier, who figured to be the starting quarterback until he was hurt in the final pre-season game. The 49er fans let out a chorus of boos, letting Nolan know they want the future intrusted to Owen, their lucky 13th round pick.

World Cup To Underdogs

CARACAS (UPI) — Underdog South Africa took the world Cup golf trophy home today, frustrating runnerup Japan and frankly embarrassing the third place U.S. pair of Hale Irwin and Lee Trevino.

Going into the 22nd World Cup championship, the United States had won 12 team trophies and nine individual titles and was heavily favored to repeat in both categories.

But the U. S. was never in contention at the 6,763-yard, par 70 Lagunita Country Club course as South Africa and Japan fought it out for the title with Bobby Cole, a 26-year-old native of Johannesburg playing the key role.

Cole, who has the looks and manner of a movie star, shot a nine under par 271 total to take the individual trophy and propel South Africa to the team championship.

His teammate, Dale Hayes, shot a 72 on the final round for a 283. total.

The sadness and discouragement of the U.S. was on both the face and in the words of Irwin, this year's U.S. Open champion.

"It was very disappointing, and somewhat embarrasing," the bespectacled American said sadly in the clubhouse locker room. "But that's golf."

Irwin finished in third place in individual standings with a total of 278.

The dissatisfaction was even more evident in the usually lighthearted Lee Trevino, who admitted that this just wasn't his tourney.

The U.S. finished with a 563, four strokes behind Japan and nine behind champion South Africa.

GREAT CATCH — University of California wide receiver Steve Rivera made a spectacular one-handed catch on a first-quarter pass from Steve Bartkowski Saturday in Berkeley. Stanford defensive back Kelly Walker tackled Rivera on the Cardinals' one yard line following the 17-yard advance. The reception set up Cal's first touchdown.

Big Game QBs Look Impressive

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Despite decisions by the Stanford coaching staff, Guy Benjamin has an excellent future as a college quarterback for the Cardinals and Steve Bartkowski, who completed one of the best college careers in the history of the game at California, has as bright a future in the pros.

Both stood up nicely last Saturday in Stanford's 22-20 victory over California in the 77th "Big Game." Much has been said of late to downgrade the game as being of any significance except to the old grads. One thing about Saturday's game, though, for sheer excitement you'd have to go a long way back to beat it.

Both sides won and lost the game in the final minute.

Stanford was sitting on a 19-13 lead when California, behind Bartkowski, moved the length of the field in less than two minutes for the touchdown and PAT that gave the Bears a 20-19 lead with 26 seconds left.

Moxie, Accuracy Helpful

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The Los Angeles Rams have a National Football League division title virtually clinched thanks to James Harris' accuracy while the Buffalo Bills have new hope for their playoff berth thanks to Joe Namath's moxie.

Harris threw an eight-yard touchdown pass to Jack Snow with 1:14 left yesterday giving the Rams a 20-17 victory over the Minnesota Vikings. The Rams will clinch the Western title in the National Football Conference tonight if the Pittsburgh Steelers, who are seven-point favorites, defeat the New Orleans Saints. (The 6 o'clock game will be televised locally on Channels 7 and 11.)

The Bills just managed to squidge past the Cleveland Browns, 15-10, but were handed a "new lease on their division title life" when Namath came through in the final minutes to give the New York Jets a 17-14 triumph over the two-time Super Bowl champion Miami Dolphins. The Bills and Dolphins go into the final three weeks of the season with identical 8-3 records.

Harris, who suffered an ankle injury in the third quarter, completed 10 straight passes in the fourth as the Rams came from behind for their victory before a crowd of 90,266 in Los Angeles. The Rams were behind 17-6 after three periods but scored two touchdowns in the final period, the second drive starting with 3:53 left and consuming 69 yards on seven plays.

O. J. Simpson ran 41 yards for one touchdown and set up field goals of 41 and 42 yards by John Leypoldt in leading the Bills to their triumph over the Browns. The Bills completed only one pass, good for nine yards, in a game played in a light rain in Cleveland.

The Dolphins were sandbagged from an unexpected quarter when Namath, playing despite the fact his father is in critical condition in Beaver Falls, Pa., threw TD passes of three and 45 yards, the latter with 5:05 left in the game, giving the Jets their third straight triumph. Namath's winning TD pass came only 1:38 after Bob Griese put the Dolphins ahead 14-10 with a six-yard swing pass to Jim Kiick.

Cardinals 23 Giants 21

The Cardinals virtually clinched a spot in the playoffs for the first time since 1948 when Jim Bakken kicked his third field goal of the game, a 36-yarder, with three seconds to go.

Lions 34 Bears 17

Punt returns of 38 and 58 yards by Dick Jauron led to two touchdowns for the Lions, who moved steadily on the ground to beat the Bears easily.

Packers 34 Chargers 0

John Hadl completed 14 of 22 passes for 157 yards, including one touchdown, leading the Packers to their highest single-game point total since November, 1972.

Patriots 27 Colts 17

Jim Plunkett threw a touchdown pass and ran for another TD as the Patriots snapped a three-game losing streak and remained in their division race along with Miami and Buffalo.

Cowboys 10 Oilers 0

Doug Dennison scored Dallas' touchdown on a one-yard plunge in the first period and Efren Herrera added a 25-yard field goal early in the third period in a game dominated by the Cowboys' defense.

Bengals 33 Chiefs 6

Ken Anderson completed 19 of 33 passes for 262 yards and four touchdowns in leading the Bengals to their romp over the Chiefs.

Redskins 26 Eagles 7

Rookie Larry Jones' 102-yard TD kickoff return early in the third period was the clinching play in the Redskins' win over the Eagles, who have lost six straight games.

HAPPY TIME — Jane Blalock jumped for joy after scoring a birdie on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff against JoAnn Prentice to win the $35,000 Lady Errol Golf Classic. Miss Blalock won $5,000 yesterday at Apopka, Fla. She has a three-round total of 215. (UPI Telephoto)

Braves Watch Watch

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The Buffalo Braves have the best record in the National Basketball Association, but after yesterday's game with Chicago they'd settle for a gold watch—that kept perfect time.

The Braves saw an 11-game winning streak come to an end when the Bulls scored a 91-89 victory, but Buffalo Coach Jack Ramsey thought the game clock was one second fast.

The Bulls had their two-point lead with one second left on the clock when Norm Van Lier of the Bulls and Garfield Heard of the Braves had a held ball and had to jump it off.

"That time ran out while the ball was still in the air," Heard said. "The clock shouldn't have started until the ball was touched by somebody, and it did."

The ball was tipped to Bob McAdoo, whose shot at the basket after time was out missed anyway.

"They're complaining about the clock?" Bulls Coach Motta said quizzically.

Ramsey was, but he said, "I made my complaint to the officials on the floor."

In other NBA games, the Kings beat Cleveland 109-89, Washington edged Los Angeles 111-108 and Houston throttled Seattle 124-109.

In the American Basketball Association, New York stopped Denver, 99-96, Memphis topped St. Louis 103-94 and San Diego drubbed Utah 117-97.

Southern Cal, Ohio State To Play In Rose Bowl

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The Rose Bowl is becoming the private domain of Ohio State and Southern California.

Those two national powers earned the right to represent their conferences in the New Year's Day shindig at Pasadena, Calif., over the weekend, and it marked the third successive year they will be meeting in the nation's oldest post-season classic.

Ohio State was selected as the Big Ten Conference representative by a vote of the athletic directors yesterday after the third-ranked Buckeyes had defeated second-ranked Michigan 12-10 at Columbus, Ohio, on Saturday to finish in a tie with the Wolverines for the conference championship.

Southern California, which lost to Ohio State in last January's Rose Bowl but won the previous year, clinched a spot in this year's game by whipping UCLA 34-9 to win the Pacific Eight crown for the seventh time in the last nine years.

The appearance of Ohio State marks the first time in history that a Big Ten school will represent the conference in the Rose Bowl three years in a row. Prior to 1973 the Big Ten had a ruling that no team could go to the Rose Bowl two years in a row unless there were mitigating circumstances... such as Ohio State's refusal to accept the bid in 1961.

Ironically, the team with the best record in the nation over the past three years has been Michigan (30-2-1). Yet the Wolverines have not been to a bowl because they have failed to defeat the Buckeyes during that stretch.

For the second year in a row Michigan blew a chance to defeat Ohio State because of the inability of kicker Mike Lantry to convert a field goal. Last year, when the two teams battled to a 10-10 tie, Lantry missed a 44-yard field goal attempt in the closing seconds and Saturday he failed from the 33 with 18 seconds left.

Instead, it was Ohio State's kicker, little known Tom Klaban, who proved the difference in the game. Klaban, a soccer-style kicker from Czechoslovakia who was not even on scholarship, booted four field goals in four attempts—three of them from more than 40 yards —to account for all the Buckeyes' scoring.

Southern California didn't have to sweat as much in winning its crucial game against UCLA. The Trojans clearly outmanned the Bruins and, with Anthony Davis shattering O.J. Simpson's conference career rushing mark, easily whipped UCLA for the third straight year.

Davis, a Heisman Trophy candidate, rushed for a season high 195 yards and boosted his career total to 3,609 yards as the Trojans extended their league unbeaten string to a record 25 games. Davis also scored one touchdown, bringing his career total to 48.

Ohio State and Southern California weren't the only teams to win important games Saturday. Oklahoma, Harvard, Baylor, Tennessee and Brigham Young also turned in key victories.

Oklahoma remained unbeaten by whipping Nebraska 28-14 to win the Big Eight Conference, Harvard upset previously undefeated Yale 21-16 to tie for the Ivy League title, Baylor moved a step closer to its first Southwest Conference crown in history by downing SMU 31-14, Tennessee nailed down a Liberty Bowl berth by topping Kentucky 24-7 and Brigham Young won the Western Athletic Conference and a spot in the Fiesta Bowl by defeating Utah 48-20.

Steve Davis, Joe Washington and Jim Littrell combined for 482 yards rushing in Oklahoma's victory over fifth-ranked and Sugar Bowl-bound Nebraska.

A one-yard run by quarterback Milt Holt with only 15 seconds remaining gave Harvard a comeback victory over Yale. Holt, a senior from Honolulu, moved the Crimson 95 yards in the last five minutes for the winning score.

Steve Beaird rushed for 133 yards and scored three touchdowns and Neal Jeffrey connected on 11 of 17 passes for 166 yards in sparking Baylor's victory. The Bears can nail down their first trip ever to the Cotton Bowl if Texas beats Texas A&M next Friday.

Stanley Morgan scored two touchdowns and Ricky Townsend kicked three field goals to spark Tennessee's victory over Kentucky. The triumph earned the Vols a spot in the Liberty Bowl opposite Maryland at Memphis, Tenn., on Dec. 16.

John Betham ran the opening kickoff back 103 yards for a touchdown to get Brigham Young started on the way to its rout of Utah.

Hughes Has Four Class A Times In Tam B Meet

Four class A times by David Hughes and three by Elizabeth Willard highlighted the Tamalpais Swim Club's performance over the weekend during its annual class B meet at Tamalpais High School.

Hughes, swimming in the 11 and 12 age group, won the 100 freestyle in 1:03.8 and the 50 butterfly in 33.6. He was second in the 200 individual medley at 2:44.4 and the 100 back in 1:20.1 All four times were class A.

Miss Willard, swimming in 10 and under, won the 100 I.M. in 1:22.8 and the 50 free in 33 flat, and was second in the 50 breaststroke at 44.5 All three times were class A.

Some 1,500 swimmers representing 21 teams from the Zone 3 area took part in the meet. Tam Swim Club posted a total of 19 A times.

Marin Hockey Teams Win Two

Marin Amateur Hockey Club teams won two out of three games in Northern California Amateur Hockey League action over the weekend.

Saturday in Hayward, the Bantams beat that city's team, 5-2 behind a hat trick by Chris Bonbright and one goal each by David Frentzel and George Salladin.

In games yesterday, the Mites defeated Santa Rosa in Santa Rosa, 3-2, with Peter Schank recording a hat trick, and the Squirts lost to Hayward, 4-3 at Raydine Ice Skating rink in Corte Madera. Don Weger had two goals and Elliot Bloom one in the losing cause.

their typewriters and others started the long dash to the dressing rooms. These were the same writers who earlier in the week, and by a vote of 17-0, had picked Cal to beat Stanford.

But wait a minute, here comes Benjamin, the quarterback forced into Mike Cordova's shadow all season long when he probably should have been No. 1 all along.

Starting from his own 24, Benjamin connected on a 19-yard throw to tight end Ted Pappas. He threw the next pass incomplete, then hit the other tight end, Brad Williams, on a 25-yarder that put the ball on the Cal 33. Williams squirted out of bounds to stop the clock, which now showed two seconds left.

Mike Langford, who earlier booted field goals of 29 and 31 yards but missed the PAT on Stanford's final TD, then came in and sailed the ball five yards over the crossbar for a 50-yard field goal and the ball game.

Benjamin replaced Cordova, who came up with his third straight ineffective game, late in the third quarter.

Rohnert Park Wins Salad Bowl

SALINAS — The Rohnert Park Collegians scored three touchdowns in the fourth quarter Saturday to defeat the Salinas Tigers, 32-12 in the Monterey Pop Warner football league's Salad Bowl at Salinas High School.

Jim Knight, Larry O'Connor, Jeff Cowens and Gary Bradley each scored a touchdown, and O'Connor accounted for eight extra points for Rohnert Park. The Collegians led at halftime 8-6, but trailed 12-8 at the end of the third quarter.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Partial Cash-In Of Bonds Permissible

By DAVID R. SARGENT

Q. My mother has a $10,000 Series E Savings Bond bought in 1940. If she cashes it in she will have to pay income tax on the considerable interest which has been earned. Can she cash in a portion of the bond, say $1,000 this year, $1,000 next year, and so on? If this is allowed, would any bank handle it? — R.I.

A. Partial redemption of any E bond in a denomination of over $25 is possible. In your mother's case, she would request partial redemption to the extent of $1,000 maturity value, with the balance to be reissued (as of the original date) as nine $1,000 E bonds. On the back of the bond, above the signature, after the request for payment the words "to the extent of $1,000 maturity value and reissue of the remainder" would be added.

She should present her request to a local bank where her signature would be certified by a bank officer and the request for payment amended as described above. This bank will then forward the bond to a Federal Reserve Bank where the transaction will be completed. By following this procedure, tax liability will be incurred only on that portion of the bond which is redeemed.

Q. Could you evaluate General Foods' (NYSE) potential? Why has the stock performed less well than other food stocks recently? — J.B.

A. The September quarter report was somewhat disappointing, with earnings up only 3.6 per cent on a 17 per cent gain in sales. Profit margins were under pressure from rising costs for raw materials, packaging materials, labor, etc. Several recent moves by the coffee-producing nations to bolster the price of coffee have also contributed to share weakness. Because the supply situation is favorable, it is unlikely that these ploys will succeed. In its 52 years of operation, financially strong General Foods has never reported a loss. New products, highly profitable overseas business and a strong marketing organization should stimulate accelerated earnings growth.

Petroleum Pizza In Your Future?

By MARTIN SKALA
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Food chemist Richard H. Leet is pioneering a nutritional frontier.

Leet is president of Amoco Foods, the first U.S. company to develop an enriched foodstuff made indirectly from petroleum.

It's a kind of yeast that converts ethyl alcohol, a highly refined petroleum derivative, into a food supplement that is 53 per cent pure protein.

The flourlike powder, he asserts, "is a highly nutritional food additive that compares favorably with soy flour and nonfat milk solids as a source of protein."

Despite the high cost of oil, Amoco, a subsidiary of Standrad Oil Co. (Indiana), is optimistic enough about the new product's future to build a multimillion-dollar food-from-oil factory in eastern Minnesota.

Processed indoors, and entirely independent of the weather, the factory's yeast output will yield as much protein as an estimated 400,000 acres of agricultural land utilized to feed beef.

If the bland-tasting powder does what Amoco claims it will — add nutritional value to many existing foods without adversely affecting flavor or appearance — many food processors may soon be offering consumers "petroleum-enriched" breads, meat patties, snack foods, and cereals.

A plant food, yeast has a long history of beneficial use in human diets, Leet points out. Normally, however, yeasts are derived from agricultural products such as grain alcohol.

By using hydrocarbons as a source of protein, Amoco and other oil companies with similar projects under way believe they can significantly stretch the world's overstrained food supplies in the next decade.

In Europe, oil and chemical companies such as British Petroleum, Royal Dutch-Shell, and Imperial Chemical Industries are developing technology for mass production of single-cell proteins (SCP) a generic term that encompasses many kinds of yeasts, molds, and bacteria.

Like Amoco, the European firms employ a complex fermentation process in which selected hydrocarbons such as menthanol or paraffin waxes are used as a key nutrient for breeding single-cell protein.

While technology for making SCP from hydrocarbons is well beyond the horse-and-buggy stage, large-scale production is still around the corner. Large sums of money will be required for petroleum feedstock and fermentation facilities, experts say.

Moreover, extensive livestock-feeding tests have to be conducted before SCP products are judged fully acceptable for animal, much less human, use.

Besides acceptability, the question of economics is critical. There is still some doubt whether petroleum protein will be competitive with such conventional sources of protein as fishmeal and soya over the long run.

In London, Shell scientists say they have scored a major technological breakthrough by devising a process to make SCP directly from natural gas. The Shell process takes the gas directly from the ground, with only minor pretreatment, and converts it into SCP.

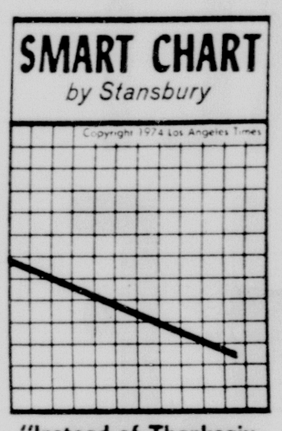

This approach would avoid the high capital costs involved in building petrochemical feedstock-production facilities. If the process proves economically feasible, much of the natural gas now flared off in the Middle East oil fields could become a source of food for hungry people.

Food processors need to do more testing before they are convinced that the yeast will enhance the taste and nutrient of baked goods, meat patties, and snack foods.

So far, tests indicate that Amoco's yeast could replace egg solids in enriched breads. It also extends the bulk and enhances the flavor of meat patties in much the same way that soy flour does.

Someday in the future, Leet speculates, slices of juicy "roast beef" may be made largely from texturized yeast. "You won't be able to taste the difference," he says.

Prices Mixed In Slow Stock Market Trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices, after registering small gains at the outset, turned mixed today in slow trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Some coal and coal-related issues were slightly higher as reports indicated coal miners and operators had reached an agreement in principle on expanding a tentative new contract.

But most investors were cautious because there was no way to determine at this time how rank-and-file members of the United Mine Workers Union would vote on the new contract. The nationwide coal strike, approaching the beginning of its third week, has disrupted the nation's already faltering economy.

Prices were slightly lower in light trading on the American Stock Exchange.

Crocker Christmas Checks Sent Out

Crocker Bank has distributed more than $18.7 million to its 1974 Christmas Club accounts.

The bank reported that this sum represented a decrease of $444,000 from last year's total. Crocker also said that the 78,421 accounts this year represented a decrease of more than 5,000 from the total of 1973. The checks for 1974 averaged $240.

AT&T Boss Claims Competition Is Tough

NEW YORK (UPI) — The federal government's antitrust suit against AT&T came at a time when the giant conglomerate faces "more competition than we ever had in our history," according to John deButts, the company's chairman.

"I think it ironic," deButts said on the CBS Face The Nation show yesterday. "In 1949, the Justice Department filed an anti-trust suit against us. It was settled by consent decree in 1956.

"They did it because we didn't have any competition. Today, we have more competition than we ever had in our history and they start another case. It doesn't quite follow."

DeButts also said the utility plans to go ahead with a public offering of $600 million it canceled last Friday, two days after the U.S. announced the antitrust suit.

"We will be back for the $600 million," he said. "We have to have the money sometime in order to finance our constuction program."

He repeated AT&T's determination to fight the government action in the courts.

"We're not going to seek a compromise," deButts said. "Any compromise that would be made would adversely affect the consumer."

He also said smaller companies that compete with AT&T's Bell Telephone system enjoy a special advantage over Bell.

"These specialized common carriers are providing service over heavy routes where there is lots of traffic," he said. "The Bell System, however, is required under law to provide this service anywhere in the country."

The government suit seeks to force AT&T to divest itself of Western Electric, its manufacturing subsidiary.

EATING NIGER SCALE

Iranian Ladybugs In Foreign Service

By HENRY HAYWARD
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NAIROBI, Kenya — The sturdy little ladybugs of Iran have been pressed into service for a rescue mission far from their native land.

The small red bugs are being imported into the West African nation of Niger to eat the white scale bugs that destroy Niger's valuable date plam trees and worsen the impact of the severe Sahel drought.

It seems a classic case of finding one bug to control the depredations of another. Scale bugs and ladybugs are natural enemies, and ladybugs have voracius appetites.

So far scientists on the scene have noted no unfavorable ecological side effects from the activities of the imported ladybugs.

Experts for the United States Agency for the United States Agency for International Development and Church World Service working in northern Niger discovered that the date palms of the area were being blighted by a disease known as white scale, caused by a tiny bug.

In their search for control measures, it was found that certain ladybugs, expecially the Iran variety, consider white scale a delicacy. But ladybugs were in short supply in Niger. So it was decided to bring in thousands of the little insects from Iran to use on Niger's suffering palms.

The plan seems to have worked. Some observers claim one adult ladybug will eat up to 400 white scale insects per day.

In a country already devasted by drought and famine, saving the remaining date plam trees is considered imperative. The trees provide much for the simple fabric of the country — food, firewood, shade, cover for houses and huts — as well as helping hold back encroaching Sahara sands with their roots.

Thus, while busily munching away on their favorite menu in their new home, the members of the ladybug squad are helping Niger, in a small way, to recover from the effects of its natural disasters.

Marin Youth Advocates To Open Office In Novato

Marin Youth Advocates, a group which helps young people who are having problems with their parents, their schools or the police, will open an office this week in Novato.

The organization originated in San Francisco where it operates the Huckleberry House for runaways.

The Novato facility, financed by a federal grant, will be at 890 Tamalpais Avenue.

Gary Sello, a former Tomales resident and one of the coordinators, said the Novato office will serve as a base for a mobile van which will travel throughout Marin holding therapy and counseling sessions.

Sello said the group plans to hold rap sessions between Novato high school students and police as one of its first projects. "It's an attempt to open up communication."

Youth advocates is not associated either with police or schools and has its own identity, according to Sello. It is for young people who seek help on their own and normally will not accept referrals from police, schools, social service or other agencies.

The mobile van will provide services "where they usually don't get them," in outlying areas such as Point Reyes, Bolinas and other areas, he said.

The van will be staffed by at least three persons and have a two-way radio hookup to the Novato office.

All services are free, Sello said.

Beauty Contest Judges Rapped

LONDON (UPI) — Luz Maria Osoria, Miss Colombia, accused the judges in the Miss World contest yesterday of choosing Helen Morgan, 22, Miss United Kingdom, solely because she had an illegitimate son.

"It is wrong for an unmarried mother to be Miss World," Miss Osorio, 18, said.

"The organizers have adopted a double standard of morals.

"Last year they sacked Miss United States for not abiding by their rules, but this year they have chosen a girl who is an unmarried mother."

American Miss Marjorie Wallace, a 20-year-old American, won last year's Miss World title, but it was taken away four months later, allegedly because of publicity surrounding her relations with singer Tom Jones and two international sports stars.
